university college, new portal of entry, acquaints students with procedures, programs

The 8,000 freshmen entering Ohio State in 1969 were forced to make one fewer decision than their predecessors of past years. All first-year students, along with a good many sophomores, were enrolled in University College, new "portal of entry" for incoming students.

"It is an extra effort on the part of the University to be concerned more than ever before about the academic success of students," said Richard H. Zimmerman, dean of the college.

He went on to explain that many students come to Ohio State undecided as to their major or choice of degree colleges, and that University College allows those in such a position to enroll in a baccalaureate curriculum.

During Fall Quarter about 3,000 students were initially enrolled in two new buildings on West Campus, the physical beginnings of what would eventually be a self-contained two-year college.

Located on the opposite shore of the Olentangy River, the new classrooms became veritable show-cases for the newest in educational facilities. Rooms were planned by individual departments to insure the most beneficial design for their specific needs. For example, language rooms were equipped with a listening center connection and much blackboard space.

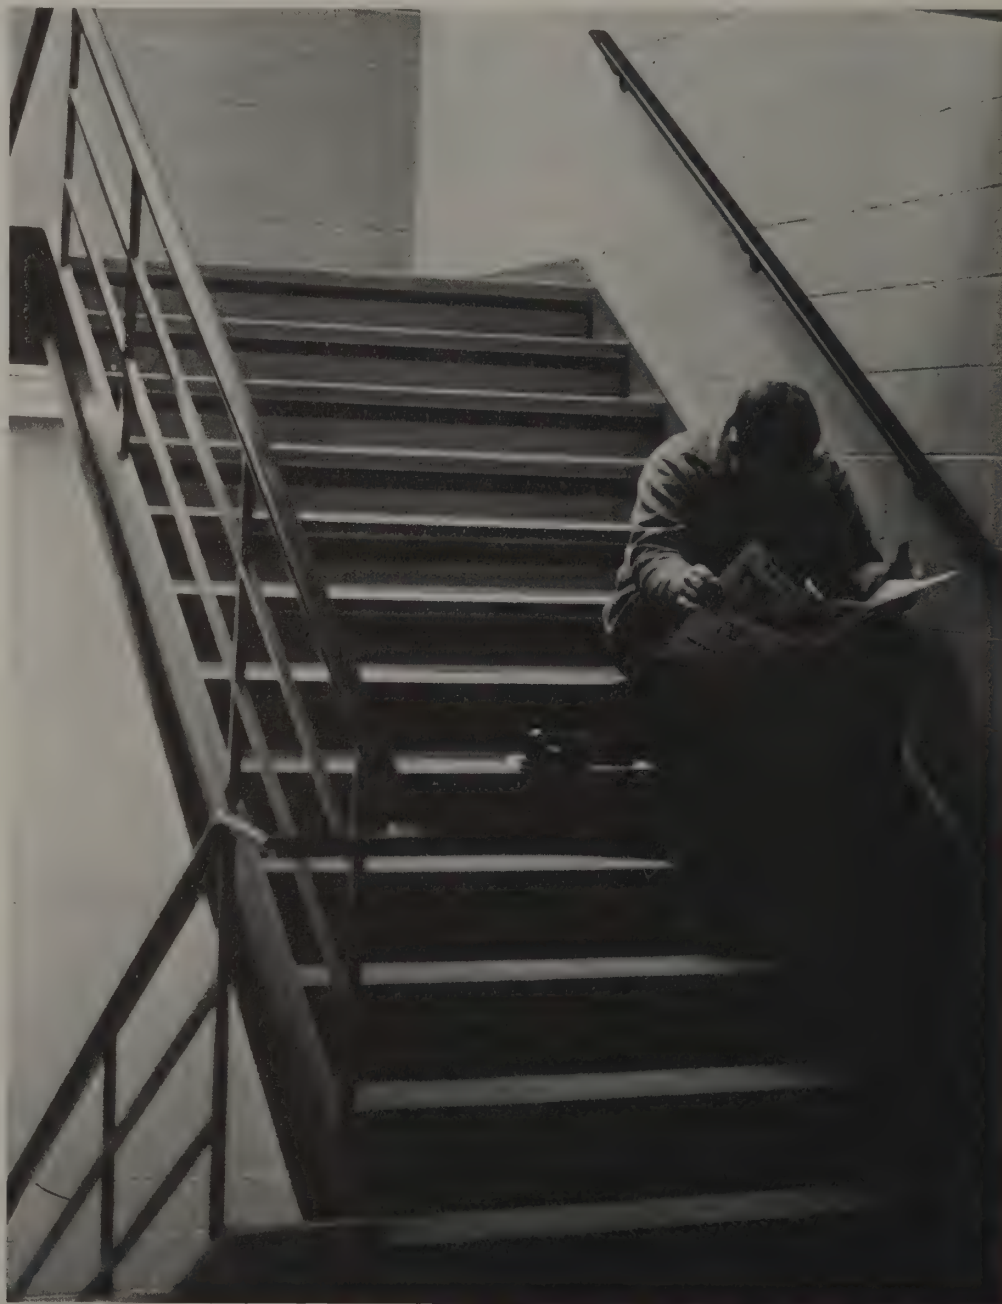

Even before the newly opened classrooms were properly broken in, construction had begun on three other buildings, including a $3 million undergraduate library with a tentative completion date of late 1970.

Although the University provided bus service, some students felt the distance between most of their classes and University College a formidable obstacle. That, coupled with the mud and noise of building construction, brought rejection of the program from a few students.

The majority, however, found the extra personal counseling they received answered a lot of questions about the University's often complicated procedures.

Dave Kainrad, a freshman, voiced his favorable opinion of the program. "I think it's a great idea—it gives you time to think and not be pressured into anything. You know, I don't even mind the bus ride. It's not as crowded over there."

peace is purpose, method in national moratorium days

In an unusual display of cohesiveness of purpose, campuses and organizations across the nation acknowledged America's first national day of protest against the Vietnam war on October 15.

At Ohio State, the self-imposed order of the day was peaceful protest. Compared to other schools, State's involvement was quiet and unspectacular. The accent seemed to be on an intellectual understanding of the issues rather than merely emotional reaction to them.

Student Assembly sponsored a prelude of activities, dubbed a "teach-in," in the West Ballroom of the Ohio Union. A ten-hour session of speeches, movies and the like allowed students to participate or just observe. The program received a bit of criticism for only presenting the pacifist viewpoint, but the day's sponsors considered the event a big success, as did those attending the teach-in.

Though the University did not formally recognize the Moratorium, many classes were either called off or their regular curricula suspended in favor of discussions of the war, the draft, or the Moratorium itself. The OSU Faculty Council, in an announcement made by Gordon Grigsby, associate professor of English, endorsed the peaceful intentions, as the Lantern also did, editorially.

Stephen Stollmack, a graduate engineering student and chairman of the Ohio State Vietnam Moratorium Committee, obtained permission to use the steps of the Administration Building for the day's activities, which included a reading of the names of Ohio war dead. Each hour a new group of readers and listeners had formed, eager to take part in the solemn ritual.

A month later, a second Moratorium day was held in Washington D.C. Chris Patronik, member of the local steering committee, commented that Ohio State sent about 1,300 participants. One of the major events of the November Moratorium was the March on Death, in which each marcher carried a sign with the name of a Vietnam war casualty and shouted that name upon reaching the front of the White House.

woody's boys surpass great expectations, break records, overwhelm all foes but one

It is difficult to discuss the 1969 Ohio State football season without letting superlatives get the upper hand. The majority of the players comprising the 1968 Rose Bowl winning team returned, and there was no reason to think that their talents had diminished or that they would not repeat the perfect season record of the previous year.

Unprecedented national press coverage predicted the Buckeye rampage and then, as the team began to make the original forecasts sound modest, sportswriters found themselves grasping for adequate exclamations.

Quarterback Rex Kern, fullback Jim Otis, and defensive back Jack Tatum seemed to head the Bucks in the publicity department, but it would be unfair as well as inaccurate to say that the team was dominated by any one or two individuals. With one exception. Using a calm, steady hand, Coach Woody Hayes molded the talents of his individual players into a team marked with agility and great power. Never taking a victory for granted, Hayes refused to let his players make the mistake of overconfidence.

In the opening match, Ohio State overwhelmed Texas Christian by a score of 62-0, the highest number of points for a Buckeye squad since 1950. An incredible 562 yards were racked up by State, with Kern completing five of eleven passes for 110 yards and rushing for 78 yards.

For an encore, the Bucks traveled to Washington and a 42-14 win. State got off to a sluggish start, having to punt the ball away twice after unsuccessful drives.

However, midway in the first period Kern ran a perfectly executed option play around the right end, cut inside and streaked downfield for a 64-yard touchdown run. Fullback Jim Otis and back-up quarterback Ron Maciejowski scored the other touchdowns.

Back on home ground the next Saturday, Ohio State trounced Michigan State, predicted to be one of the toughest teams of the season, by a score of 54-21, the most points ever scored against Michigan State Coach Duff Daugherty's rugged defense.

Despite the fact that Minnesota outpassed and outgained Ohio State, the Bucks still managed to win by a 34-7 margin. The game was saved by Buckeye recovery of five Minnesota fumbles, breaking up long Gopher offensive drives.

Apparently, Hayes corrected the team's problems, for the next Saturday Illinois fell to State 41-0. The defense especially shone, giving up only eight first downs, allowing only 70 rushing and 86 passing yards, recovering four Illinois fumbles and intercepting one pass.

Away from home the next weekend, State methodically pounded Northwestern 35-6. Otis made one exceptional run around the left end for 25 yards in the fourth quarter. He also caught the first passes of his career, catching two for 17 yards, one of which was a 12-yard touchdown pass.

Wisconsin proved no match for State's powerful offense as the 62-7 Buckeye victory showed. While Maciejowski and third-string quarterback Kevin Rusnak led Ohio State to a new single-game total offense high, Buckeye defense grabbed two Badger fumbles and intercepted two passes.

Playing the next Saturday on snow-covered home turf, State slammed Purdue, their top conference foe, by a score of 42-14. Mike Phipps, the much-praised Boilermaker quarterback, proved no problem for Ohio's pass defense. Middle guard Jim Stillwagon led the devastating Buck pass rush, forcing five interceptions and 26 incompletions. Buckeye offense was equally awesome, accumulating 436 yards total.

The Purdue victory marked the 17th-straight conference win for the Bucks and the 22nd straight all-game victory.

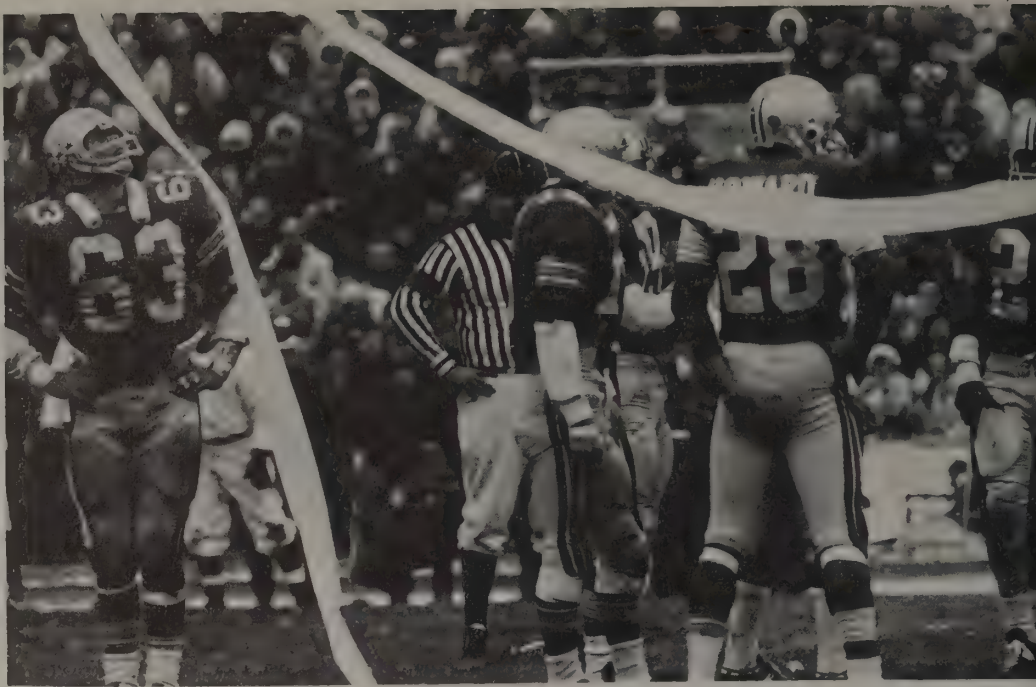

But all good things must come to an end, and on November 22 at Ann Arbor, Michigan, they did. Whether overconfidence or simply not-up-to-par playing was the reason, the final game of the season ended at Michigan, 24—Ohio State, 12.

In post-season awards, Buckeye players got what they had earned—lots of well deserved recognition. Jim Otis was named by his teammates as most valuable and Ohio State dominated the various "All-American" compilations.

In retrospect, the season was a bit unfair. None of the teams, except Michigan, seemed even a reasonable match for the Buckeyes. In the Centennial Year for college football, Ohio State's 1969 team gave its fans an exciting and memorable season, one that the coming century of Buckeye gridgers will have to hustle to top.

... and all ohio state fans reel in shock

A record crowd of more than 100,000 gathered at Ann Arbor, Michigan, to witness college football's upset of the day, weekend, and according to some, history. Coeds cried and staunchly loyal alumni remained so, but one fact remained incontestable: On November 22, Ohio State's 22-game winning streak came to an abrupt end.

The game began with the Bucks' reception of the kickoff and their push to the Michigan 11-yard line in nine plays. Senior Jim Otis' fourth-down run fell inches short, and Michigan took possession.

Ohio State defense drove for a gain of five yards in three downs. Larry Zelina returned their punt with a 32-yard run. Quarterback Rex Kern completed a 13-yard pass to Jan White, and Otis carried for a touchdown. The conversion try failed and the score stood at 6-0.

The Wolverines returned the kickoff to their own 45, and in 10 plays tied the Bucks. Their success in the conversion brought the score to 7-6; for the first time in the season the Bucks trailed an opponent.

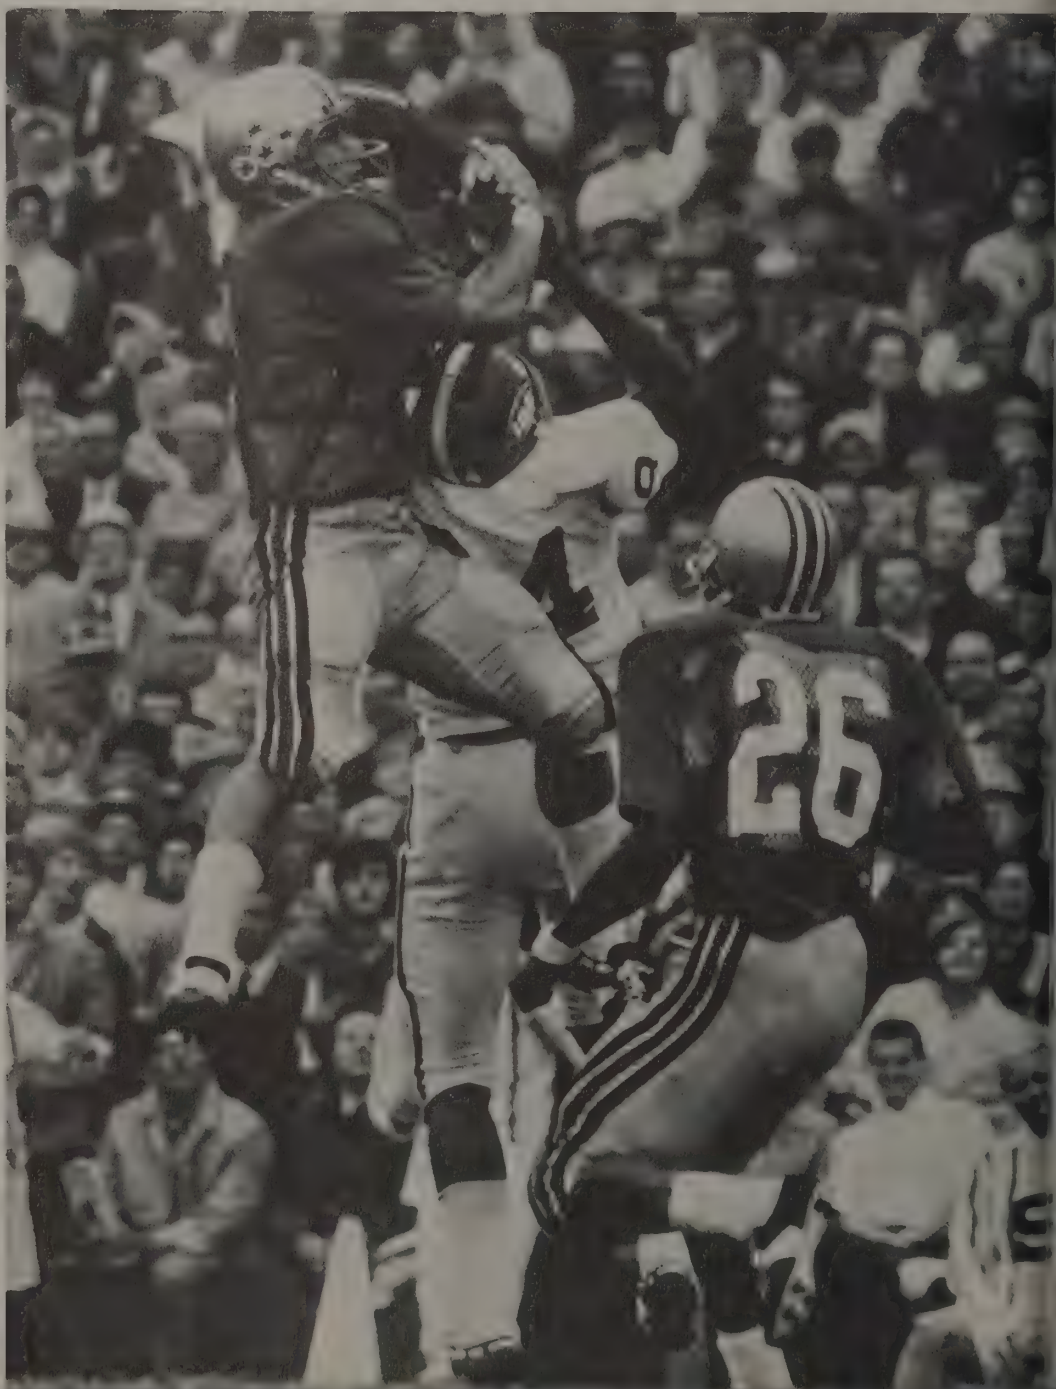

A pass from Kern to White sparked the latter's 14-yard touchdown run, and Ohio State again took the lead. The scoring continued when Harry Pierson ran a 60-yard return for the Wolverines, and quarterback Don Moorehead went over to raise the tally to 20-12. With a conversion kick and a field goal shortly before the half, the score became 24-12, where it was destined to remain. Buckeye defense tightened in the second half, holding Michigan to a 12-point lead. Ohio's offense, however, failed to rally successfully, and the half-time score went on the books.

multi-sponsored week provides showcase for black culture

Anyone walking into the Ohio Union during the week of November 17 to 21 had to notice a number of goings-on and exhibits centered on a color and a culture—Black.

The purpose of Black Culture Week, sponsored by the Kennedy-King Action Corps, the Ohio State chapter of NAACP, the Black Arts Society, South Campus Student Association, and Ohio Union Activities, was to make people aware "that worthwhile things are being done in the arts by black people," according to Paula Dickson, assistant director of Union Activities. Judging from the quality of the representative works shown, "worthwhile" seemed an incredible understatement.

Any mention of black culture brings music to mind; appropriately, heavy soul sounds came from the Main Lounge each day, and made it difficult, in fact, for some listeners to get around to their meals.

Black artists had a great opportunity to give their works lots of public exposure in the lounges and halls of the Union. Ranging in style from the traditional to the avant-garde, the paintings represented almost every facet of black culture as seen through the eyes of its most adroit interpreters. Especially interesting were tribal artifacts from Ghana, which carried the black culture theme back to its most primitive beginning.

Activities focusing on the Black as an author's subject included a special performance of Jean Genet's militant play "The Blacks," readings from "In White America," and an address by Dr. Loyal N. Gould on "Racism and the Mass Media." The works of black poets were interpreted during several readings that took place throughout the week.

The spirit of the program even invaded the Union Cafeteria. Taking the culture back to its days in the rural South, the "Soul Dinner" menu consisted of hush puppies, catfish, fried chicken, ham hocks, and pumpkin pie. Some critics thought the dinner carried a serious theme into silliness but not a complaint was heard from anyone who actually indulged.

The week ended with a special showing of the film "To Sir with Love" with Sidney Poitier, an event that ranked a black cinematic artist with the musicians, painters, and poets.

'forum' aspires to 'advocacy journalism'

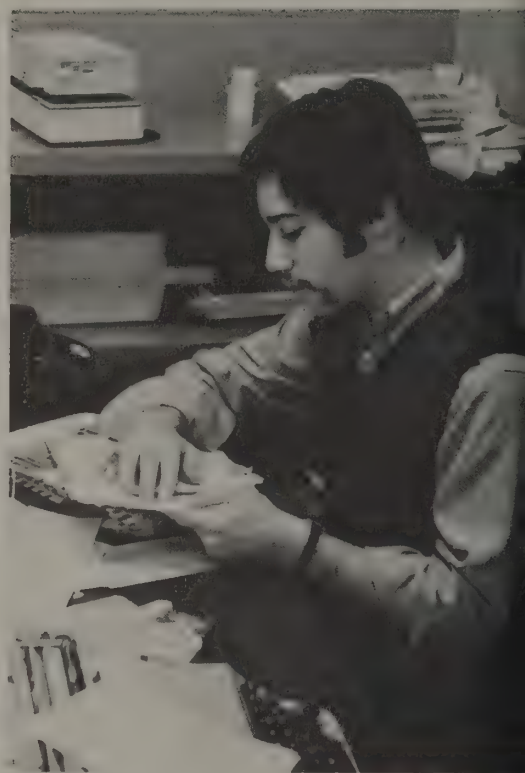

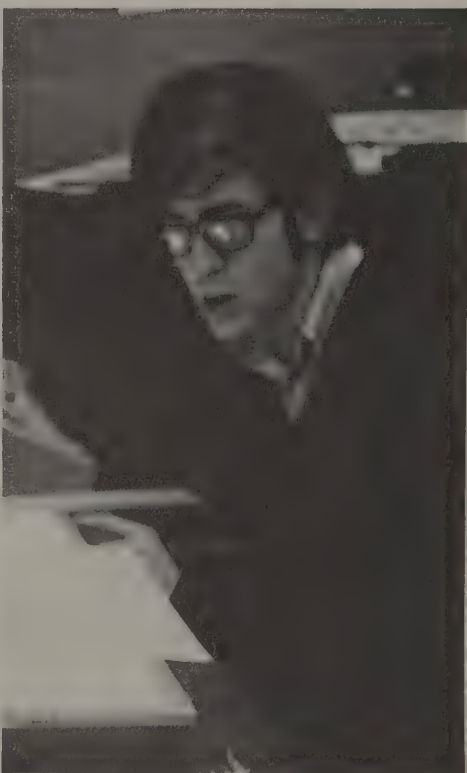

"The University Forum" began with an investment of $120 and a belief that Ohio State students urgently needed a journalistic soapbox on which to voice their opinions. At the end of Fall Quarter, with a circulation of 20,000 and up, "Ohio State's Only Independent Newspaper" appeared to be well established in its West Campus office.

Editor Marty Wolfand explained that the paper was conceived on a principle of "advocacy journalism," meaning that the articles were written with the authors' personal opinion as an integral part. Wolfand contended that giving readers background information, as well as a definite stand on the issues, could put them in a better position to form their own convictions. Definitely liberal in its attitude, the paper encouraged all views, on all issues, and got them.

Published bi-monthly and distributed free of charge, "UF" covered a variety of news topics. Several features, such as coverage of the Moratorium and film and theatre reviews, deserved special recognition for their comprehensive outlooks. The newspaper avoided the excesses of the underground press in favor of more conventional journalism in the liberal vein.

Unfortunately, Winter Quarter brought an announcement from Wolfand that the paper was forced to fold because of "inadequate staff interest and tight money." He stressed that no pressure from the University was involved, and added, "We just never got the response we expected."

'gallimauphri': baroque, beads, and beardsley

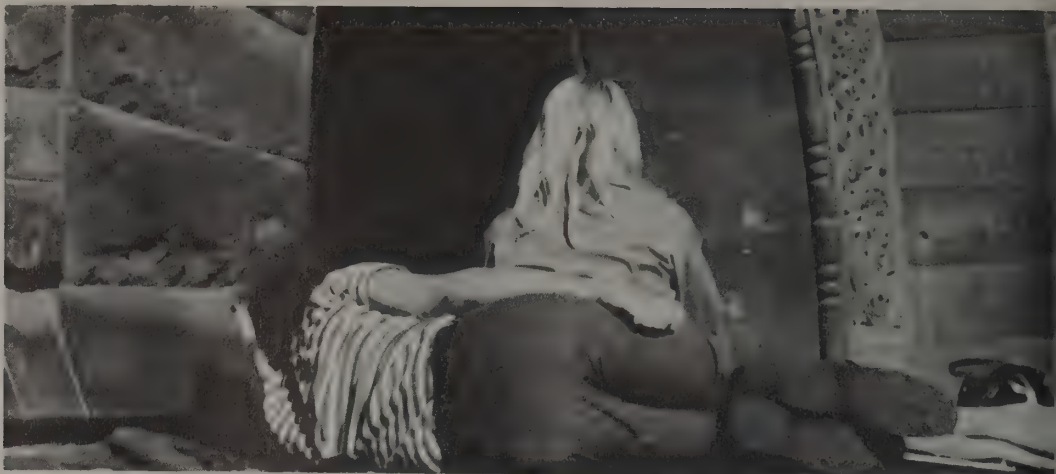

What could a British Navy stew and Ohio State's first new magazine since the demise of the "Sundial" possibly have in common? Both were concerned with a gathering together of tidbits, a pot-pourri, if you will. And both were called "Gallimauphri."

The brain-child of editor Ed Johnson, who had worked on the "Sundial," "Gallimauphri" was conceived as a general interest magazine with a little something for everyone. After laying the groundwork for the publication during Spring Quarter, 1969, Johnson and his staff took their ideas to the Student Publications Board, in the form of a highly visual and complete presentation. The Board was impressed, and by December, 1969, a new magazine had come into existence.

The first issue went on sale December 5, selling at 35 cents a copy. Since the premier issue included poetry, a short story, fashion and sport car features, and interviews with sociologist Patrick Cleaver and Steve Katz of Blood, Sweat and Tears, only a person with very limited interests could not find something to catch his eye.

It was the completeness of concept that made the biggest impression on most readers. The idea of using a stark black-on-white motif proved not only financially wise, but startlingly effective, as well. The art and advertising designs by Jon Bentz gave the pages a simplified Beardsley effect that kept the magazine at a high visual pitch. Large headlines and generally good writing gave "Gallimauphri" a professional appearance that saved it from the too-typical collegiate look.

tyson tries new ideas; soccer defense strong

A new coach with some fresh ideas, inexperienced players plagued with injury, and plain old bad luck figured in the 1970 2-6-1 varsity soccer record.

"I brought in a lot of new formations that took the boys awhile to get used to," commented Coach Forrest Tyson, new soccer coach. He went on to say that minor injuries got so bad in one game that the manager had to substitute.

Tyson noted that though the team did not have much scoring punch, the defense was quite strong.

The first three games of the season pitted State against evenly matched teams, but through missed scoring opportunities, the Bucks were defeated.

In the final game, OSU came close to upsetting Cleveland State, the number one team in the Midwest and seventh in the nation. Only a fluke Cleveland goal in the third period, tying the score, cost Ohio State one of the biggest upsets of the year.

Several players won special recognition for their individual excellence on the field. Senior Bob Gabor scored eight goals during the season, missing the school record by just one. Co-captain Roger Noll was named most valuable by his teammates and was selected as a center halfback on the All-Ohio team.

runners wind up with 5-7 year; dextras shines

The Ohio State cross country season brought many disappointments and a few nice surprises. In a sentence, sophomore harrier John Dextras said it all with "We just never got things together."

Off to a good start, including defeats of the highly lauded Air Force team and Tennessee, which had not been defeated in three years, the runners progressively lost power and ended the year with a 5-7 record. All four Big Ten matches were chalked up as Buckeye losses, though the races against Illinois and Wisconsin were considered well run if not victorious.

Coach Bob Epskamp sent seven representatives to the final Big Ten meet at Indiana on November 15. Returning with eighth place (out of nine), only Dave Pryseski performed well enough to end up in the top 14.

As for individual performances, the Canadian duo of junior Doug Scorrar and sophomore John Dextras led the pack, with seniors Jim Docherty and Pryseski giving much needed support. Dextras especially shone, ending the season with the second All-American title in Ohio State's history.

lush, lusty 'lysistrata' tops university theatre bill

In a more pristine era, staging an unexpurgated revival of Aristophanes' racy anti-war comedy "Lysistrata" could have been a risky undertaking for Ohio State's University Theatre. But in 1969, when stripping onstage began to seem less shameful than stripping enemy corpses, "Lysistrata" looked like a fail-safe opener for the campus season. Indeed, the first threat to the play's success came not from thin-lipped prudes, but from the suspicion that University Theatre was trying too hard to be fashionably pacifist and sexy.

Director Charles Ritter, with designers David Chappell and Russell Hastings, side-stepped any such threat by making their production whimsically unique. Whereas a merely "fashionable" director would have reconstructed Athens as the playwright saw it in 411, B.C., or played up the plot's reflections on modern war protests, Ritter projected the scene to 2069, A.D. Chappell fancied that young people of the period should revert to ancient costume styles in what little they wore, while their elders clung to "out-moded" bell-bottoms, miniskirts, and beads. Hastings saw the setting as a sterile expanse of platforms and doors, enlivened only by the flutter of polyethylene drapes.

The design concept for the play restricted the color scheme to black, silver, and appropriately, flesh. Every detail, down to Chappell's fright wigs for the frenzied women, was a delight. And so arose the second threat: Might not the emphasis on design stifle the play's comedy and visceral vitality?

The answer to that question came on opening night, November 17, when Bronwynn Rieppel first bounded onto the Ohio Historical Museum stage in the title role. Obviously, no wig, polyethylene drape, nor flimsy brassiere was going to stop this spirited pacifist from having her way. Just as the heroine's proposal for a sex strike united the Spartan and Athenian women in the play, so did Miss Rieppel's swaggering, full-throated bravado provide a strong central focus, around which the comedy bits congealed into a unified, thoroughly satisfying farce.

Although Miss Rieppel could seize full command of the stage at will, she had the good grace to allow J. Dale Long equal prominence in his Commissioner role, and played unobtrusive straight man to Mary Adams' light-headed Kalonike, Joan Hyler's strong-armed Lampito, and Cathy Claxton's teasing Myrrhine. A really fine exchange came when the women chafed at denying themselves their own conjugal indulgences, and Miss Rieppel foiled co-conspirator Mardee Haidan's attempt to feign pregnancy and slip home to her lover.

Although some details of the production—the skimpiness of some costumes, the breezy sexual references, and the tightly padded phalluses worn by the frustrated males—apparently upset the finer sensibilities of Columbus reviewers, they would have done better to criticize the labored pace of the Old Men and Women's choral interludes. The long stretches of geriatric hoofing were far more serious violations of theatrical taste than any of the good-natured bawdiness.

yuletide show combines dance, music, theatre

Christmas programs, like Christmas itself, are usually most effective when kept simple and traditional.

However, on December 14 in Mershon, a joint effort from the School of Music and Divisions of Theatre and Dance titled 'The Joys of Christmas' provided not only some rarely heard musical selections, but a bit of seasonal spectacle as well.

A number of choral groups situated throughout the auditorium lobby treated early arrivals to carols, causing the vast reaches of Mershon to remain nearly empty until the 5 o'clock curtain.

The program opened with Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," with the Symphonic Choir and the University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of George Hardesty, giving strong support to the "starring" roles. Ronald Hamilton (Narrator). Paul Hickfang (Herod and the Father), Joyce Gordon (Mary) and David Belt (Joseph) sang beautifully and moved with ease through George Crepeau's blocking.

Following intermission, the various University choruses, under the overall direction of Maurice Casey, performed works by Gabrieli, Palestrina, Britten, Anderson, and Warlock. For the Britten selections, dance majors, most of whom were sophomores, performed a work choreographed for the program by Lynn Dally of the Dance Division. The program ended with everyone singing Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus."

Fred Kraps' lighting was excellent, as was the film sequence by William H. Wright, shown during the Berlioz selection.

'centennibration' kicks off year of festivities

Know what 200 pounds of flour, 300 pounds of sugar, two quarts of vanilla, six pounds of salt, 2,100 eggs, 10 pounds of baking powder and 60 pounds of fresh milk will get you? Enough green stamps for a Maserati and a 300-pound Ohio State University centennial birthday cake.

Ablaze with a hundred candles, the cake was made in the shape of the University's centennial symbol, and unveiled during the Centennibration held on January 10 in the Ohio Union.

Co-sponsored by the Student Centennial Committee and Ohio Union Activities, the event represented the first official program of the University's 1970 centennial observation.

The entire Union got into the swing of things with an ice cream social in the cafeteria and free bowling and billiards downstairs.

The crowning of the Centennial Queen was preceded by a number of speeches. Dr. Alfred B. Drake, chairman of the general Centennial Committee, presented the objectives of his group in cooperation with Timothy J. Sheeran, president of the Undergraduate Student Body.

Christina Lee McClain, a junior from Rocky River, Ohio, was crowned Centennial Queen by Rex Kern, co-captain of the Buckeye football team.

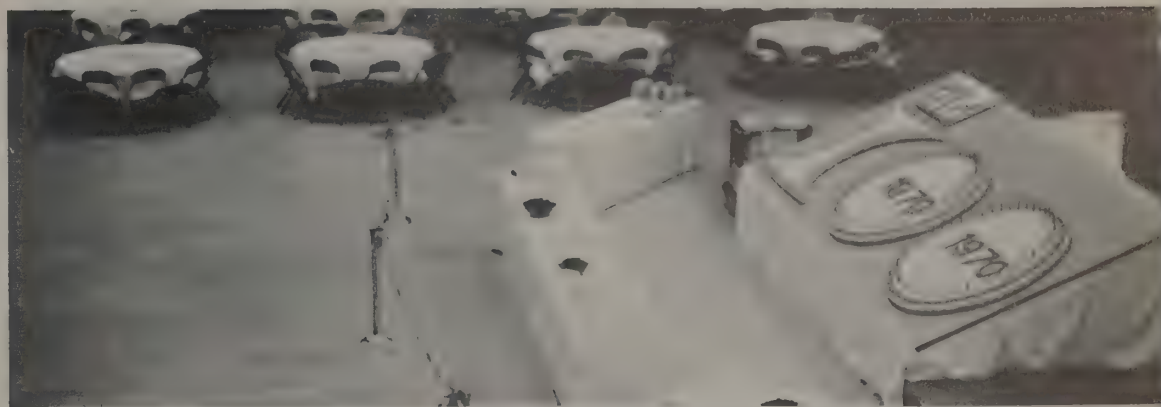

After all the speeches had been given and Queen Christina had begun her reign, President Fawcett along with several government officials proceeded to cut the super-cake.

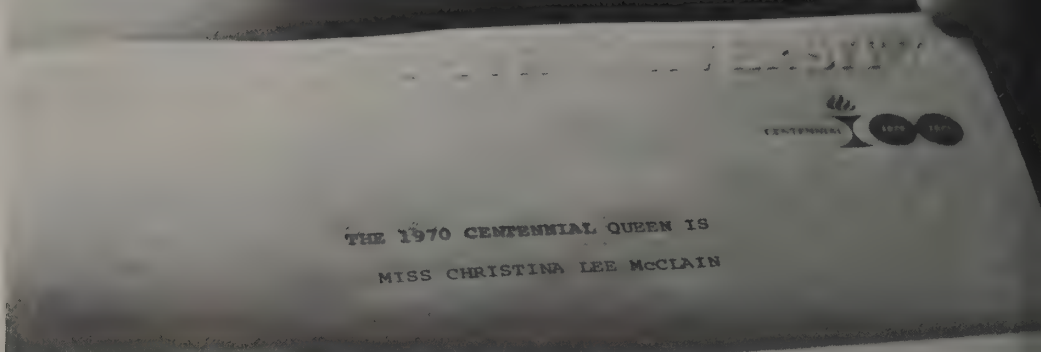

As the recipe served 4,000, there was a helping for anyone who wished to indulge. Those who did collectively agreed that the creation tasted as good as it looked.

u.n., black power, female superiority among topics of visiting campus speakers

Winter Quarter's usual lack of interesting doings was eased a bit by a number of speakers with provocative, sometimes startling, ideas on subjects ranging from world peace to "why female genetic make-up is superior to male."

On January 15, Miss Angie Brooks, a delegate to the United Nations for 15 years before her appointment to the presidency of the 24th General Assembly, spoke to a Mershon audience on the U. N. and its relationship to today's youth.

Sponsored by the Geneva Forum and the International Student Association, Miss Brooks chided some modern youths for not presenting any positive answers to problems.

The Liberian diplomat commented that today's young people are asking for more rights, but that responsibilities must accompany those rights. For a contrasting example, she pointed to Indian youths who have organized a drive to increase the literacy rate among their nation's citizens.

Following the speech, some 350 candle-carrying marchers circled the Oval to commemorate the 41st birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

On January 24, the fifth annual Law Careers Day, sponsored by the Pre-Law Club, opened its forum with a speech by William W. Mulligan, U. S. attorney for Ohio's southern district.

Speaking to 41 law school deans and 500 students in the Ohio Union, Mulligan emphasized that one cannot just like the "idea" of being a lawyer.

"The law is very fascinating, very chaotic, and very human," he said. "No experience known to man is quite like what an attorney goes through after he has presented a case and the jury goes into deliberation."

On January 29, U. S. Congressman Adam Clayton Powell brought his message to an audience of 1800 in Mershon. Sponsored by Omega Psi Phi, Buckeye Brothers, Alpha Phi Alpha, and the Undergraduate Student Government, Powell stressed the need for black as well as interracial unity.

The New York representative defined Black Power not as the color of one's skin but rather as "the way you think." He added that it also means black pride, and that black people can pick any color of skin from "Chalk to Chocolate."

He reminded the audience that it is not the "Silent Majority" that has been instrumental in bringing about world changes; rather, he said, it has always been the vocal minority.

Controversial anthropologist and social biologist Ashley Montague let his theories on "The Natural Superiority of Women" be heard on February 24 at a packed Hitchcock Hall.

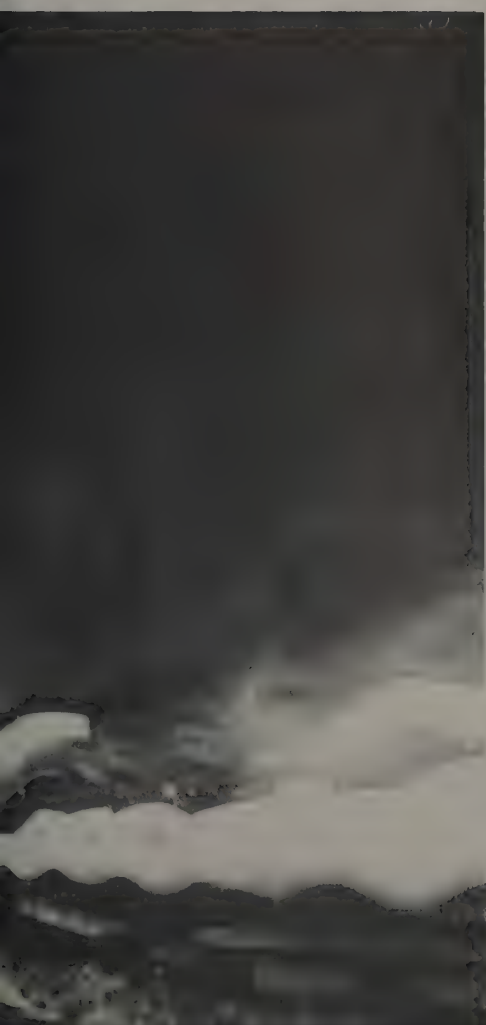

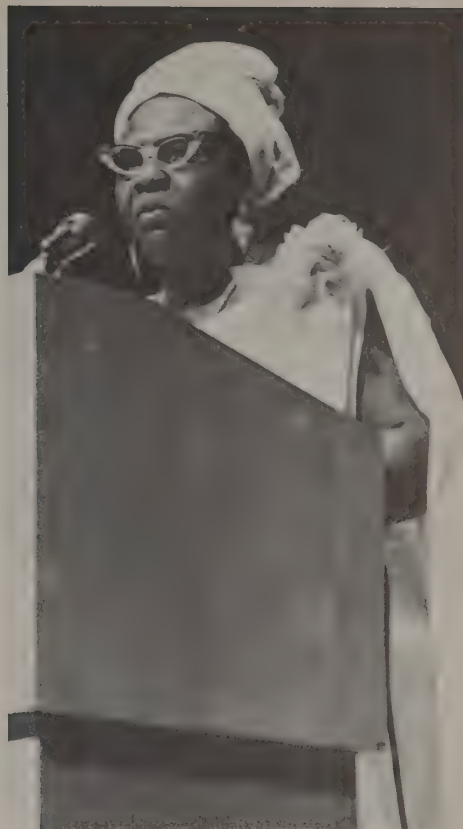

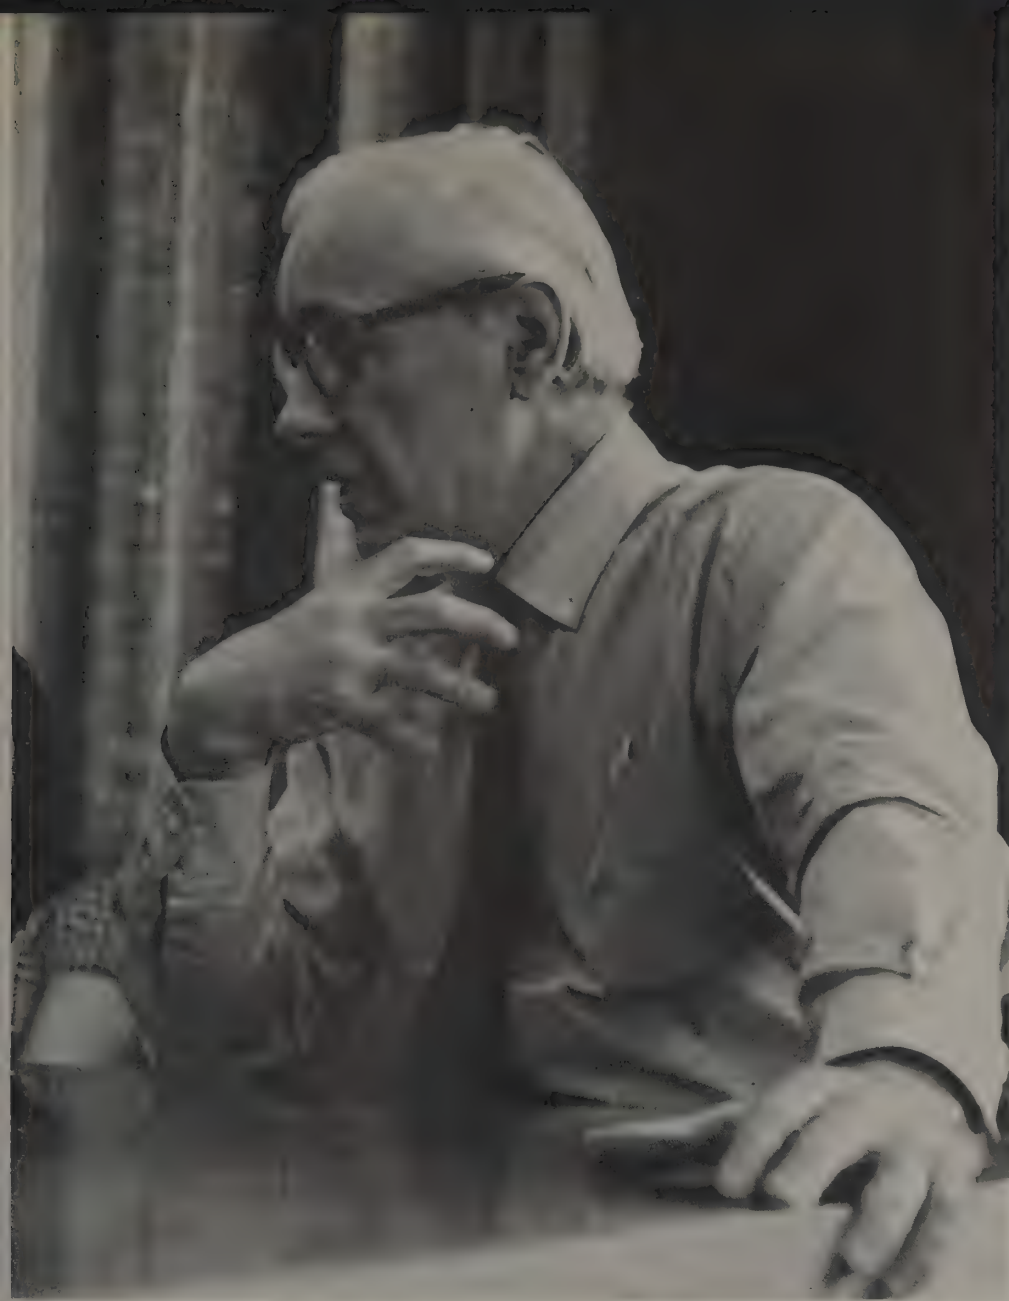

He pointed out that physiologically women have always had an advantage, since their genetic structure is superior to the male's. He explained that "males have one x chromosome and one crippled y chromosome. If the x chromosome lacks a valuable gene, there is no gene on the y chromosome to compensate for it."

Montague, sponsored by the Women's Self-Government Association, drew loud approval from his mostly-female audience when he blamed mankind's violent history on the male's need to gratify his ego.

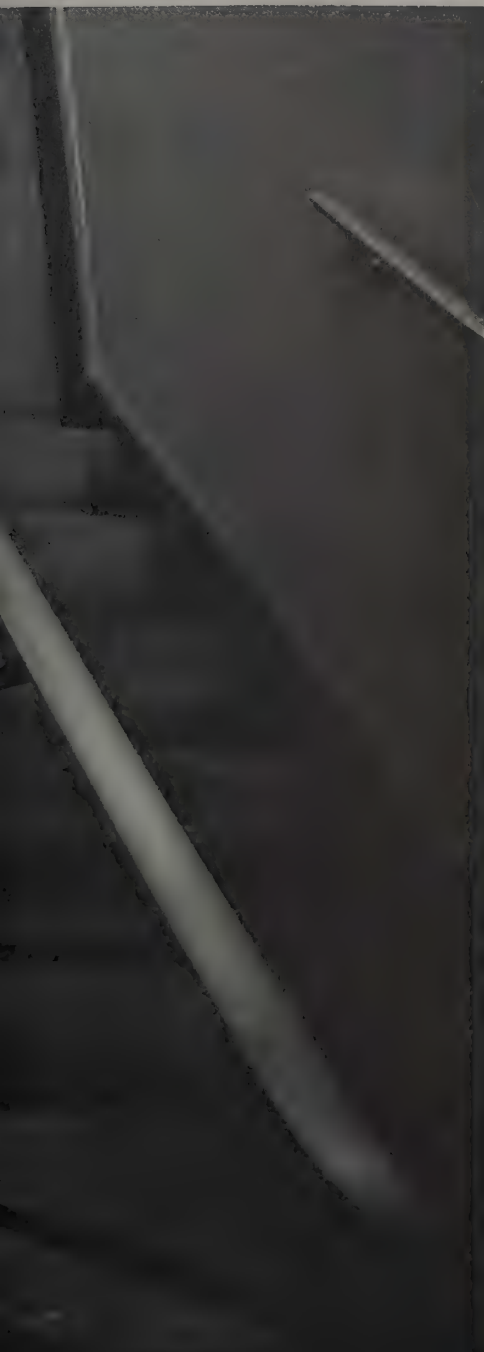

His declaration that "women are the blacks of the masculine world" brought the female listeners to their superior feet in agreement.

$2 million health center features increased facilities, larger staff

With the post-Christmas opening of the new John W. Wilce Student Health Center on Milliken Road, ailing students found their inevitable waits more scenic (what with the indoor garden), quite a bit shorter, and (considering the increased efficiency of the facility) well worth the time.

The $2 million, four-story structure doubled the available space and equipment of the old building, and the addition of a pharmacy and expanded lab facilities allowed students to have their medical needs met completely within the center.

Along with the new building came a larger staff (increased by 20%) to better and more quickly treat the 400 to 600 patients that daily seek treatment. The staff included about 45 physicians working three to four hours per day, the equivalent of 18 full-time doctors.

The new center was built to accommodate an enrollment of 50,000 and could be expanded by adding two more floors.

Pneumatic tubes for sending records and information throughout the building were installed to speed communications.

Rooms for medical group meetings and areas for mass-processing procedures, including the chest X-rays taken during orientation, were all located on the first floor. Physicians and employees of the center found a special blessing here as well—parking spaces!

The second floor, actually built at ground level, contained the reception and admitting areas, a medical records room, the pharmacy, and the expanded X-ray service.

The third floor contained specialty clinics, equipped for dermatology, allergy, gynecology, ear-nose-and-throat, ophthalmology, dental care, lab work, physical therapy, and mental hygiene.

A medical library, conference rooms, offices and five 2-bed rooms for diagnosis and observation were included on the fourth floor.

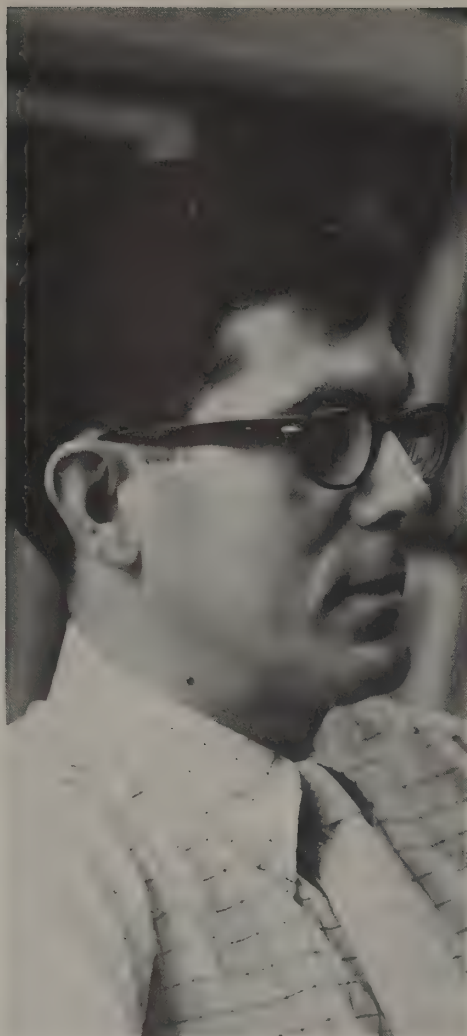

The new center was named for John W. Wilce, director of the health services from 1934 to 1958.

ohio state researchers find geological bonus

during 'summer' expedition into antarctica

Ohio State's Institute of Polar Studies celebrated its 10th birthday in February, 1970, as the subject of acclaim from the world's scientific community and the topic of a lengthy article in Saturday Review magazine.

Excitement centered on a multipurposed expedition begun in November, 1969. The studies conducted then, and one very important find in particular, greatly added to the store of evidence supporting the "drift" theory of the continents' origins.

In a Makio interview, John F. Splettstoesser and James W. Collinson, both members of the November trek, spoke of the Institute, the expedition, and Antarctica.

Splettstoesser, referring to himself as the field coordinator of the expedition, began with a brief sketch of the Institute. He commented that it was unique in America "because it is the only one that is bi-polar and multidisciplinary in its studies. We investigate the Arctic, the Antarctic and Alpine regions rather than sticking exclusively to one or two of the three areas. However, grant support has provided much more opportunity for Southern Hemisphere research, so we have naturally concentrated on the area where it is easiest to obtain financial aid."

Concerning the expedition, both men were eager to emphasize that investigating the continental drift theory was not the primary intention behind the research that was conducted.

Collinson, an assistant professor of geology and guest member of the expedition (at the request of the Institute and the National Science Foundation), added that "it was very important to have researchers in a variety of fields examining the area at the same time, thus accomplishing in one antarctic summer what would have otherwise taken several years to do. The Navy supplied us with excellent helicopter coverage, which we wanted to take advantage of while it was available."

He continued, explaining that the data gathered tended to support the hypothesis that Antarctica was once linked with other present-day southern continents in one super-continent.

Talk then turned to the real publicity grabber—the first major fossil find in Antarctica. On November 23, Dr. David H. Elliot, principal investigator of the field team and assistant professor of geology, discovered fossil samples of a land vertebrate of the Triassic age, more than 200 million years old. The fragments corresponded to similar finds in other Southern Hemisphere continents.

Both finds, along with the vast knowledge garnered from the other research done, showed that at one time the now frozen land enjoyed a tropical climate.

When asked of working conditions in Antarctica, the men had surprisingly few complaints. Though the living quarters had been understandably overcrowded, both called the facilities "excellent, under the circumstances."

Collinson commented that "the temperatures in the field ranged from -25 to about $+5$ degrees. In December, in fact, it got as high as 15 above zero. These are summer season temperatures; winter is when the temperature drops to the -100 range. Our major problem was the wind. It can come up quite suddenly and when it does, working conditions become uncomfortable and sometimes unbearable. Also, this is when frostbite becomes a real problem."

black history, newspaper point way to interracial understanding

"To Be Young, Gifted and Black," chosen as the theme for Black History Week, held all over campus February 9-13, also turned out to be a one phrase review of the talents of the individuals involved in the week's activities.

Spokesman for the event, Ray Greene, commented that the program was intended to give both blacks and whites insight into the problems, achievements, and education of the blacks throughout U. S. history.

A "Black Expo," featuring art works and displays by black organizations and students on campus, kicked the week off in fine style.

Charles Hurst, President of Malcolm X College and Ohio State alumnus, addressed a Hagerty Hall audience. With Hurst was Donald Bourgeois, a professor in Ohio State's College of Education, who spoke on the significance of black education.

Student symposiums, soul music, poetry readings and a fashion show were also a part of the week's activities.

Undoubtedly, the most popular single attraction was Dick Gregory. Speaking to as many people as Hitchcock Hall Auditorium can hold and still retain its shape, Gregory charged that "Moral pollution, not air pollution, is the biggest problem facing us today." He said that solutions to the problems lie in "total involvement" and in the "willingness to die for what you believe in."

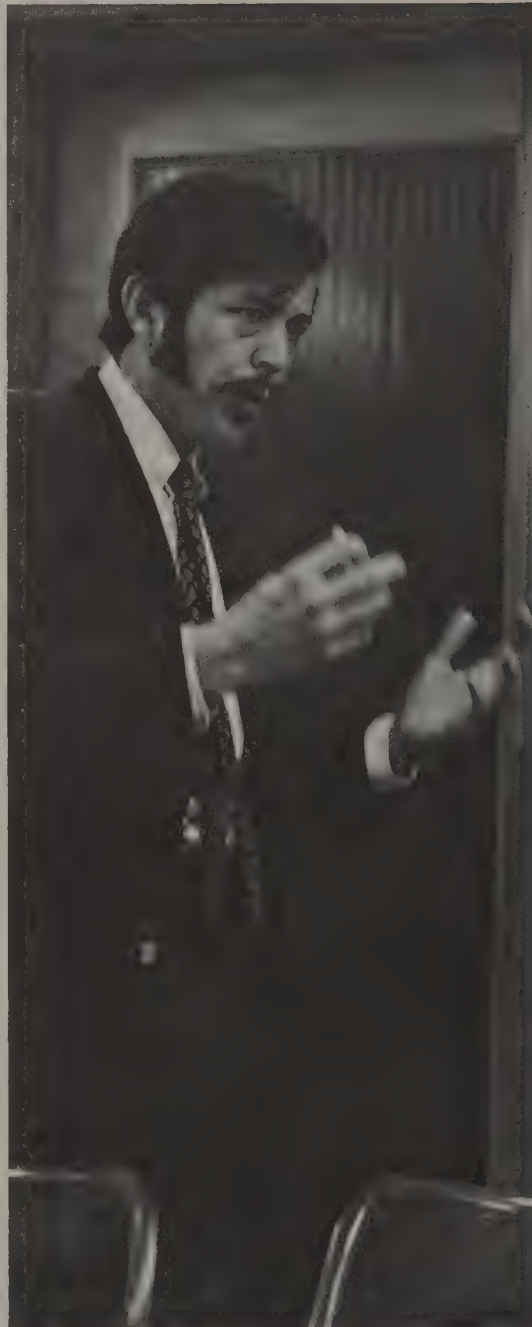

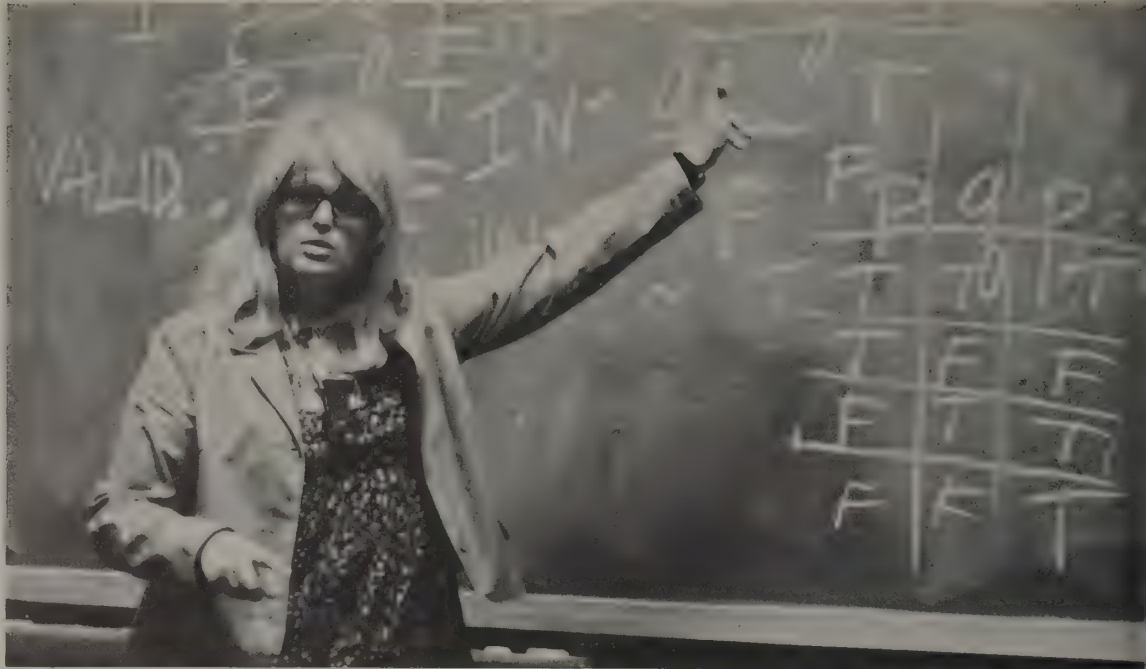

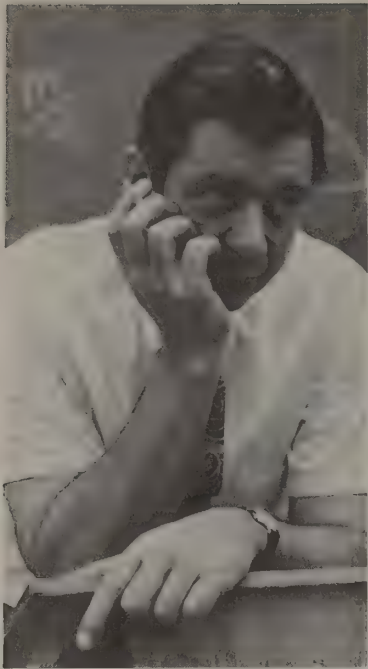

The week ended on a theatrical note with a lively talent show in Mershon. Acts ranged from Michael Smith's readings of black poetry to the drill team from West High School highstepping to "Sound Off." Lisa Neil, black, gifted and very young (three years old), wrapped the audience around her tiny finger when she belted "Oh Happy Day" with her mother, Linda, standing close by.

In January, the Student Publications Board approved a $2,500 grant for "Our Choking Times," a black student newspaper to be published bi-monthly.

According to Editor Shirley Wiley, the paper was to "provide cohesiveness among blacks on campus." The format of the paper was a combination of news reportage and black literary efforts of all kinds.

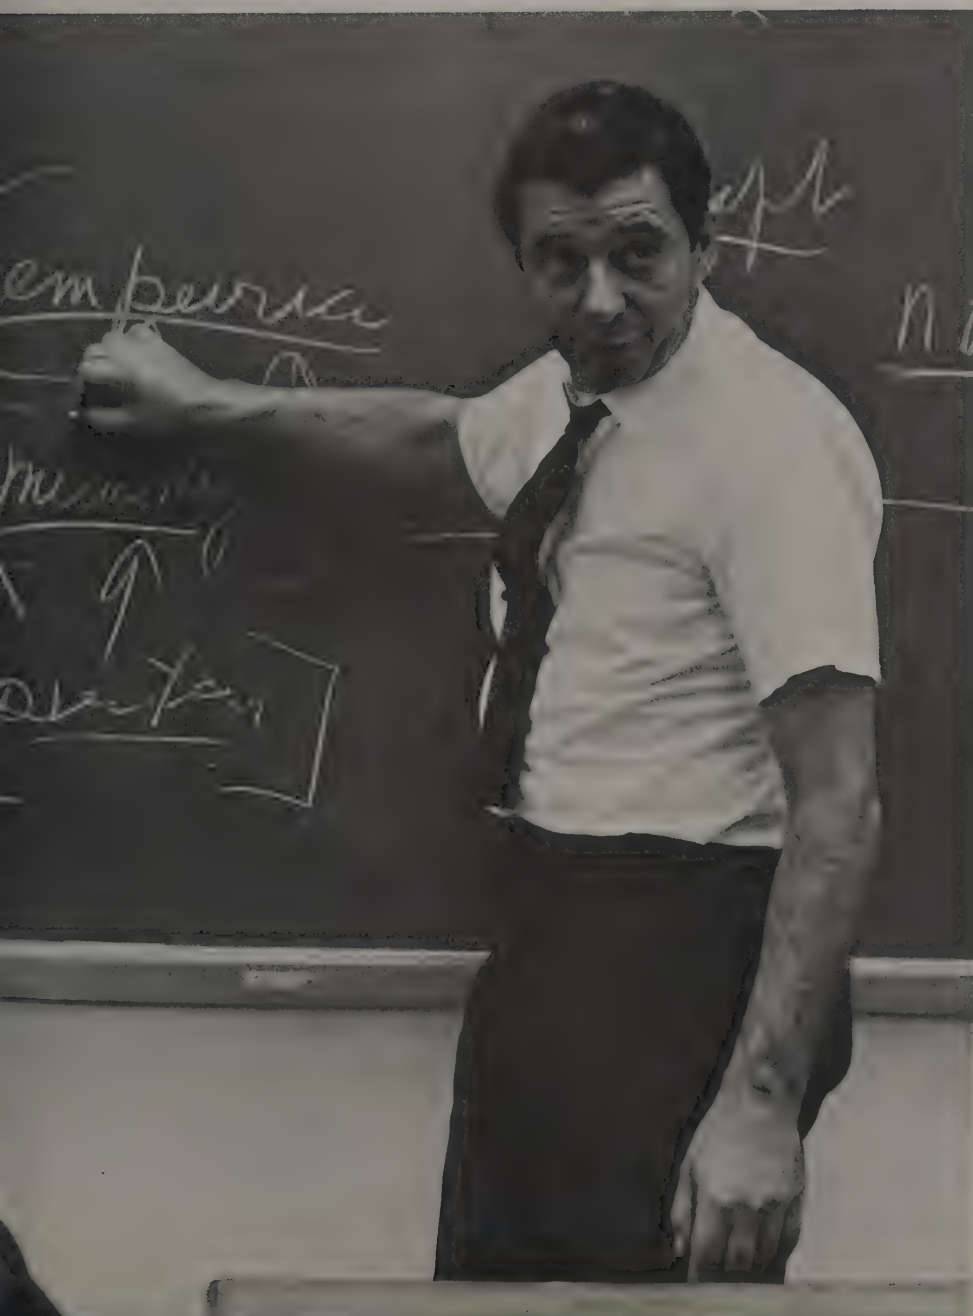

Miss Wiley said that at the onset the paper would concentrate on campus news but added, "we eventually hope to cover news at the local, national, and international levels."

crime drives campus to locks, lights

Mace, wine bottles, bricks and anything else that could be used for self-defense became standard equipment for apartment dwellers and those who had to venture out at night. Why? Fear.

Attacks, rapes, and attempts at both became nightly occurrences as a crime wave swept the campus area. Co-eds were advised not to walk alone after dark, even when on the campus itself. Lock sales, to discourage would-be break-ins, increased as students became aware that they were not completely safe, even after reaching home.

In an attempt to solve the problem, the Committee for Immediate Off-Campus Lighting was formed and collected over 10,000 signatures in support of improved lighting around the University area. Money and the inevitable red tape held things up, but a definite plan was drawn up and expected to be implemented within the year.

Even the Mirror Lake area, long a favorite with couples, was to receive 32 lighting units before Autumn Quarter.

The whole issue reached a nightmarish head with a double tragedy on February 28 that shocked the campus, and increased the cries for improved lighting and better police protection to hysterical shouts. William Sproat, Jr., a graduate student in French, and Mary Petry, a student from Mt. St. Joseph College, were brutally murdered in Sproat's apartment on W. 8th Avenue. An intensive investigation involving neighbors and many students was conducted, but the killer was not found.

greeks expand week to include area services

In the past, Greek Week never meant much except to the Greeks. With this year's theme "If Not Now, When?" fraternities and sororities combined community service with traditional activities to give new meaning to the program. According to general chairman Geoffrey Webster, "Instead of just sending a check, we will be giving direct help, and also gaining self-satisfaction for doing a worth-while job."

Webster said, "We want to show independents that Greeks are no longer part of the stereotyped 1950's image of booze and football."

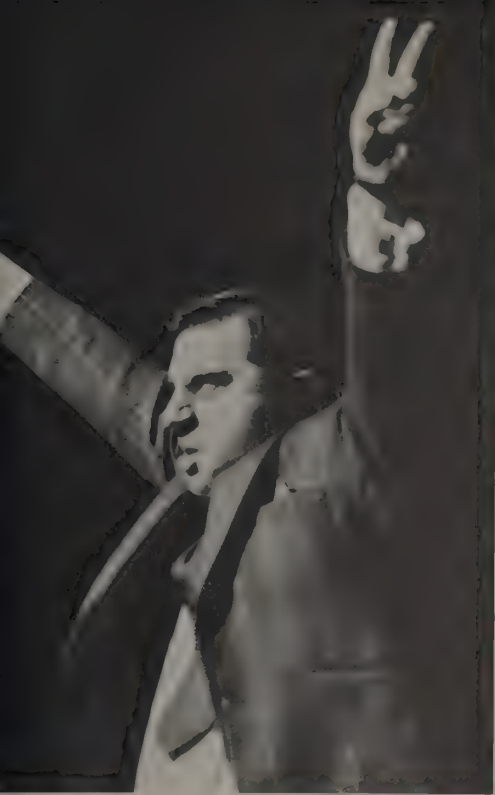

Pledges started the week off in a big way by collecting $5,100 for the Central Ohio Heart Association while selling balloons in area shopping centers. The annual blood drive in the Union was also a big success.

But the real involvement came with the Saturday afternoon, spent scrubbing floors and walls at three local YMCA's, teaching beginning swimming classes, and giving children at the Columbus School for the Blind a day of parties, pony rides, and shopping trips. About 600 Greeks participated in the various community service projects.

The week ended with the Greek Week concert at Mershon featuring Gary Puckett and the Union Gap.

cagers tie for conference third, set all-time accuracy record

A roller coaster of a basketball season, that began with high hopes for a championship, ended with a 17-7 record and third place in the Big Ten standings for Coach Fred Taylor and his cagers.

For the first time in four seasons, Taylor began the year with a strong, experienced team. All-American center Dave Sorenson and team captain Jim Clemons returned to partner a team with enough background and power to beat tough foes Purdue and Iowa.

Taylor commented at the season's beginning that experience and good shooting would be the Bucks' major assets, and height and ball handling its liabilities. In review, however, sloppiness against important opponents and bad strategy at crucial moments were the real problems.

The season opened with a victory over favored Wake Forest, marking the 200th win posted by Taylor since he began coaching the Buckeyes and the 800th win achieved by Ohio State basketball teams.

For their second game, the Bucks established a new all-time scoring record as they romped over Butler 112-89.

After defeating Northern Illinois 106-99, Ohio State had, in its first three games, averaged 105 points per game and, as a team, hit an amazing 88 per cent of its free throw attempts.

But against Ohio University, the Buckeyes lost their first game of the season, 82-80, in one of those maddening last-minute contests where cool, controlled playing spells the difference between defeat and victory.

The next five games, including Big Ten foe Minnesota, were taken by State without much trouble. Strong scoring from top players Sorenson, Finney, and Clemons and still-high free throw accuracy were major Buckeye advantages.

However, with the 77-59 defeat at the hands of conference opponent Illinois, State's championship hopes fell through. Coach Taylor commented later, "There was no consistency. All of a sudden we would stop doing everything. We beat ourselves."

After wins over Michigan, Northwestern, and West Virginia, sporadic playing against Minnesota cost State another conference match.

Of the season's remaining ten games, the Bucks won six and lost four. Through unfortunate scheduling, matches against Iowa and Purdue were not played until the end of the season. The two Iowa losses were just a matter of overwhelming Hawkeye rebound expertise. Against Purdue, however, a sloppy, defenseless first half and a dread of All-American Rick Mount were the reasons behind the 88-85 Ohio State defeat.

The season ended on a victorious note with a 96-87 run over Wisconsin.

Sorenson, named most valuable player for a second year, led the team in point average with an impressive 24.2. Clemons (21.6) and Finney (20.6) followed close behind.

But the most remarkable statistic came from the team as a whole. It was announced in early spring that the Buckeyes were the best-shooting team in major college basketball history. According to the National Collegiate Sports Services, Ohio State had established the all-time record for field goals made, hitting .544 of their attempts. Another record came from the foul line, where Buck shooters hit an amazing .808 per cent of their free throws.

young icer squad compiles best record

Icer coach Harry Neale commented before the hockey season opened that "we are improved and I think our final record will reflect this." One could say he underestimated his squad's potential. With a 19-7-1 record for the year, the team not only enjoyed its most successful season in the history of the sport at Ohio State, but it may well have broken the ice, so to speak, for future Buckeye championships, as well.

The squad, composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores, faced a long, tough schedule that began in mid-November and ended the last of February. Bowling Green and Notre Dame proved to be the only teams that could really outplay the icers, and both were beaten by State in the course of the season. Special satisfaction came with Ohio State defeats of arch hockey rival Ohio University all four times the teams were matched.

Led by captain Tom Swearingen, the team seemed to gain in scoring punch as the season progressed. Goalie Bill McKenzie, who had played hockey 14 of his 20 years, had a 3.12 goal average per game and stopped 843 shots, for a 33.7 average per game. For his efforts he was voted most valuable player by his teammates. He also shared best rookie award with Ken Lerg, who scored 17 goals and assisted on 14 to give himself 31 points for the season. Most valuable freshman was awarded to Gerry Welsh, and most improved went to back-up goalie Tom Duff.

But, as Coach Taylor said, "The 19-7-1 record for the Bucks is the real trophy that all the players can be proud of, and it resulted from a prolonged and spirited effort."

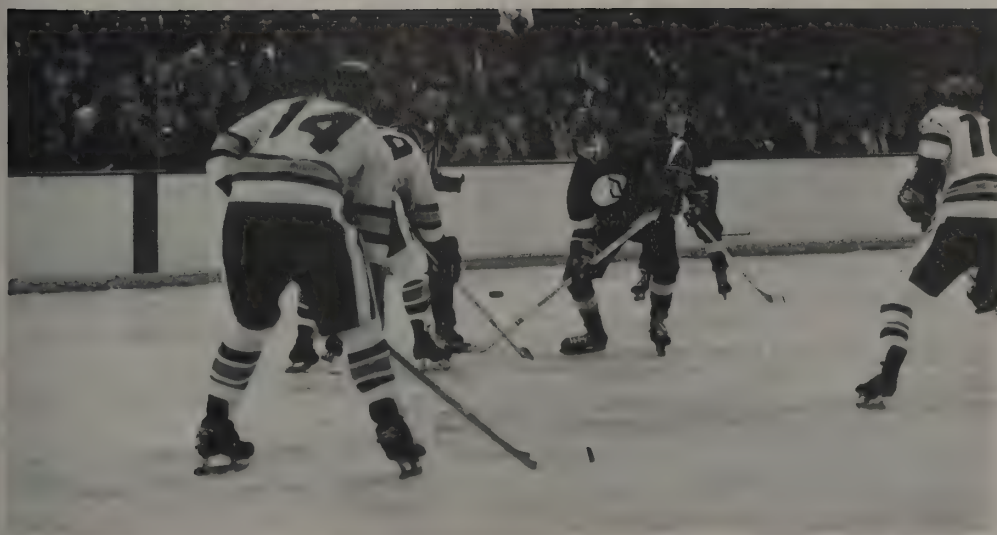

Neale, the man most responsible for building hockey at Ohio State from a second to a first-rate sport, resigned in mid-April to begin a hockey school. He also cited the cutting of his recruiting budget by the Athletic Department as a major reason for his departure.

third year ends for netmen with 16-2 record

In only its third year as a varsity sport, Ohio State volleyball has made quite a name for itself. Last year's undefeated squad wound up with the Midwest Intercollegiate Association championship and a fifth place in the national standings.

With seven members of that squad returning, Coach Karl Dunlap had every reason to be optimistic about this year's chances for a good season. With a final record of 16-2, Buckeye netmen had much to boast of.

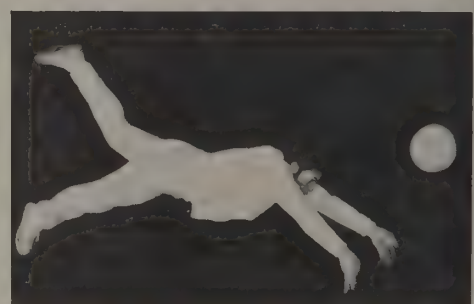

The season began good and got better, with Ohio State winning its first 13 games. But State's big rival, Ball State, proved too tough for the Buckeyes to handle both times the two teams met. Even after Dunlap switched the line-up between the two Ball State matches, Buckeye netmen could not overcome Cardinal ace Barry Long and his powerful squad.

In post-season playoffs, Ohio State received a bid to participate in the NCAA Volleyball Tournament in Los Angeles, but lack of funds prevented the team from making the trip.

Individual laurels were awarded to Rick Lueders and Ralph Collins, both named to the MIVA All-Star team by the league coaches.

experienced wrestlers take fifth place

Before the Ohio State wrestling team had commenced its 15 match season, coach Casey Fredricks said that to have a successful season, the Bucks would have to capitalize on their depth and experience. With a season record of 10-4-1, the matmen must have done just that.

After winning their first six matches, the loss to Michigan was unexpected. In the Big Ten, State grapplers took fifth place, which, according to Fredricks could have been third.

In the post season awards, co-captain Tom Kruse walked off with three—Most Valuable, fastest pin and three pin club. Other awards went to co-captain Frank Romano, most dedicated wrestler; Jim Coburn, most improved wrestler; and Paul Schmidlin, coaches' award.

fencers first in conference, sabre shines

For the second year in a row, coach Charles Simonian and his fencers captured first place in the Big Ten competition. Losing only to Wayne, Wisconsin, and Detroit, Buck swordsmen accumulated an impressive 12-3 record.

Appraising his squad, Simonian commented, "We have a well-balanced team with no outstanding weaknesses and no outstanding stars—just good collegiate fencers." Actually, considering that last year's Big Ten championship squad graduated intact, the light, inexperienced team pulled a real coup in rewarding Simonian with his best record in seven years of coaching at Ohio State.

The sabre squad, which turned out to be the team's strongest unit, turned in a 12-3 record. The epee and foil squads each had respectable 10-5 over-all marks.

Team captain Joe Kaspar took top honors at the awards banquet. Compiling a 30-10 record, he was also awarded the Riebel-Snow trophy for being the Buckeye fencer with the greatest number of bout victories for the season.

gymnasts place last in conference

Ohio State's gymnasts exactly reversed their previous year's record of 7-5 to compile a disappointing 5-7 for the season. To top it off, Buck barmen placed last in the Big Ten competition.

Gymnastics is an individual competition sport and even there Buck competitors fell short of expected performances. State's leadman and team captain, Bruce Trott, had some fine days, especially against Kent State. Coach Jim Sweeney said that the meet represented "the best day of Trott's career." He scored a total of 53.05 in the all-around after compiling scores of 9.12 on the long horse, parallel bars, and horizontal bar. Especially disappointing was the loss in the Big Ten meet to the all-around scoring of Michigan's Sid Jensen. Trott received special recognition at the Student Athlete Scholarship Recognition Dinner, receiving the Big Ten Medal of Honor, indicative of the highest four-year grade average among varsity athletes.

Other key men were Walt Buck on vaulting, parallel, rings and horizontal events. Reed Klein, Pete Clute, and Bob Harding provided team support.

swimmers take fourth, relay sets record

Coach John Bruce led his Buck swimmers into an expanded season (three more meets than last year) with a young squad made-up mostly of talented sophomores. Of the 29-man team, 14 were sophomores and six of those were Intercollegiate All-Americans.

The first loss of the year was an unexpected one to Indiana, probably the best collegiate team in the country. Other losses were to conference foes Michigan and Michigan State, both strong teams.

Repeating last year's Big Ten Championship placing, Bucks' swimmers came through with a respectable fourth place. In that conference meet, Ohio State swimmers set a new meet record of 3:07.52 in the 400-yard free-style relay with the combination of Jeff Jackman, Eric Ehrke, Bill Catt, and Jim Baehren. The most outstanding individual performance in the meet came from Baehren in the 100-yard free-style, in which he set a new team record of 46.56.

dance company opens concerts with currier's 'salutations!'

The University Dance Company, under the direction of Vera Blaine, presented its annual concert series on March 5, 6, and 7 in Merston Auditorium. The program consisted of one repeat from last year's series, two works seen in Columbus for the first time, and two premieres.

"Salutations!" provided a bouncy, colorful showcase for nearly the entire company—a perfect opener for the series. The work, choreographed during Winter Quarter by Ruth Currier to "Sonata for Small Orchestra" by Casella, concerned the nature of relationships between groups of varying numbers of people. Each association, regardless of type (sexual, impersonal, neighborly), had an underlying sense of flippancy that happily kept the piece from being a message dance. In the "Dear Friends" section, Reuben Edinger and Cynthia Pratt were excellent as the lovers who could never quite communicate.

"Assemblage," choreographed in 1969 by Lucas Hoving, was just what the title suggested—a gathering together of bits and pieces related by feeling and style rather than by formal program. The finale, which had the dancers exit dressed in George Alspach's appropriately outrageous costumes, was quite effective.

The audience didn't know what to make of James Cunningham's "Evelyn the Elevator," which had its first showing in 1968. Guest artist Cunningham, along with Lauren Persichetti, had worked with the dancers for several weeks to evoke from them the kind of "energy explosions" his work called for. Using speech, direct contact with the audience, Otis Redding, and children with a poodle, the dance's campy gimmickry not only entertained the audience but broadened its definition of the word "dance." Cunningham himself proved a real showman as well as a fine dancer.

Currier's "Dangerous World," choreographed in 1958 and presented in last year's series, was given a showing the second night. Though beautifully performed by Currier and Edinger in the leads, the work seemed archaic in theme and melodramatic in movement compared to the program's other pieces.

Overall, the company was well-rehearsed, and their extensive training was in constant demand from the difficult works. Technically, the production was perfect, as usual, thanks to production coordinator Jerry Kvasnicka and his crew.

It would be a real error, in the course of lauding the company, not to make mention of the woman who has built dance at Ohio State into an internationally recognized source of professional dancers, choreographers, and teachers. Chairman Helen P. Alkire demands a lot from the people in the Division, and the annual concert series is evidence of what they deliver.

'home movies'

The other premiere, and the last work of the series to be shown, was Lynn Dally's "Home Movies." Choreographed during Winter Quarter with funds from a grant, Dally intended the work to express movement in different qualities and quantities. Michael Sweeney designed three huge neon clouds that were originally meant to act as screens on which the movies of the title would be shown. The lights were too bright, though, and the film too dim for the desired effect, so the movies were thrown out. The clouds remained as pretty, but not essential stage ornaments for Dally's choreography.

Fusing just the right sounds, (Beatles, Steve Miller) with Shar Kraps' black and white webbed-looking costumes, the movement was simple and direct. Regardless of how different in nature, the separate phrases flowed smoothly into one another. The male acrobatics, the opening human chain and the little, passionless kiss all gave the piece a sense of child-like wonder at the world, without a trace of cynicism.

lab theatre opens with 'miss julie'

Theatre people are an ingenious lot. If something isn't at hand, they build it from whatever resources are available. At Ohio State, what was needed was a workshop theatre, one that could be used for student productions, adaptable enough for any sort of show.

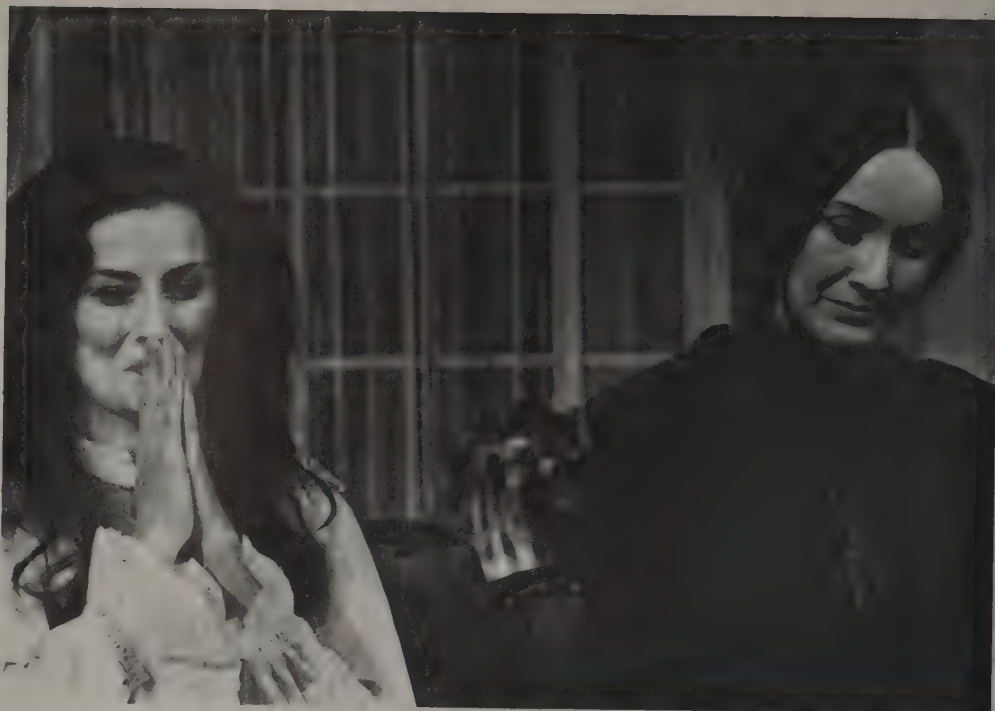

At the beginning of Winter Quarter, the new Student Laboratory Theatre opened with a full season of productions scheduled. The 110-seat theatre had the audience seated on two sides of a platform which thrust out into the center of the room from an opposite corner. Located on the fourth floor of Haskett Hall, the facilities were completely the result of student and faculty inventiveness and skill.

Director Dan Scuro, a graduate assistant, commented that "Our theatre is primarily for students to get experience in acting, directing, set design, staging, play writing, and anything else connected with theatre production." Scuro was also the director of the first production, Strindberg's "Miss Julie."

Among the other plays presented were works by Ionesco and Sartre and an original play by Richard Grupenhoff entitled "The Sex Life of the Statue of Liberty; A Little Piece for Everybody."

morrow fuses talents for sensitive, slick 'cherry orchard'

The plays of Anton Chekhov, with their intricate character relationships and seemingly shallow plots, are difficult to present successfully. For a young audience accustomed to the less-than-subtle modern media, the great Russian dramatist's gentle humor and long monologues too often become boring, pointless endurance exercises.

That the University Theatre's mid-February mounting of Chekhov's final work, "The Cherry Orchard," proved an enthralling evening is a genuine tribute to director John Morrow, his designers, and an exceptionally capable cast.

Sensitive, in addition to technically good, acting was probably the show's greatest strength. Dorothy Laming acted the owner of the orchard, Madame Ranevskaya, with appropriate reserve, never letting a single aspect of the character's aristocratic nature take complete control. As her daughters, Carolyn Grupenhoff (Anyá) and Mary Adams (Varya) fashioned women of complete contrast.

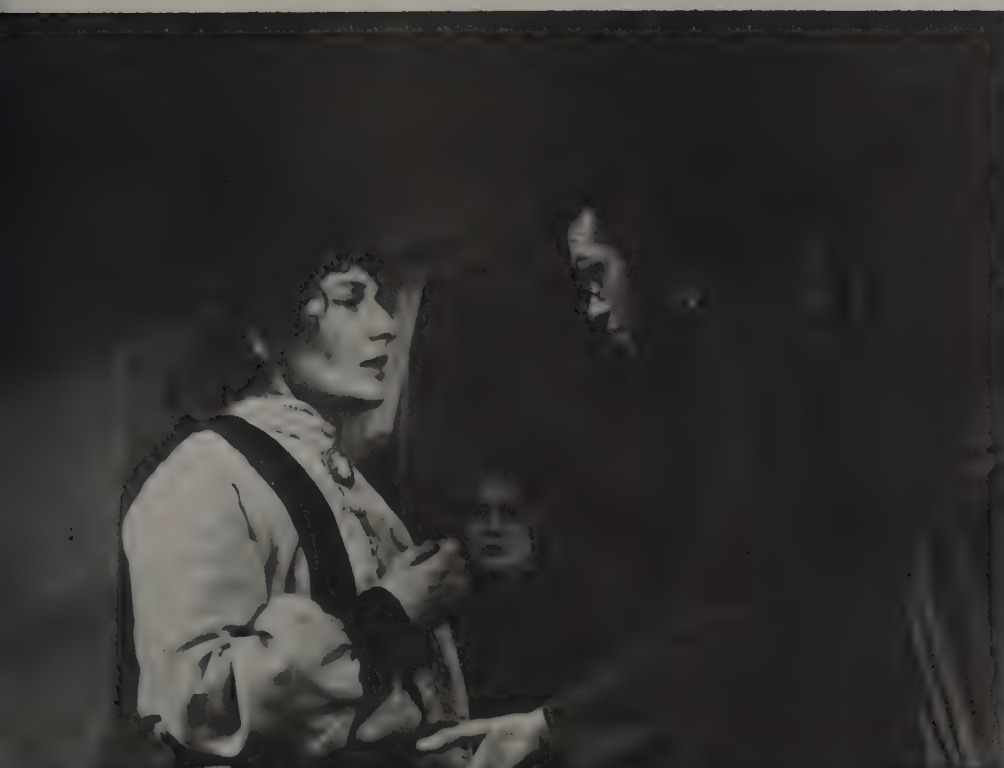

Of the rest of the cast, Robert Boyer (Gaev), Mustafa Gursel (Lopahin), and especially James Hotchkiss as the sensitive student Trofimov, were outstanding.

David Chappell's costumes, colorful and co-ordinated, were among the best he had ever created. A stunning bright pink gown for Miss Laming rated gasping approval from the audience.

So ingeniously did Russell Hastings design the sets that many of the audience forewent their intermission smokes just to see what tricks he would pull to completely change the appearance of a stage with no flies and only a few feet of wing space.

But the real laurels went to director Morrow. Even with a great play and great players, there must be a personality to fuse the parts into a whole and make it alive. For "Cherry Orchard," Morrow provided just that, and a slick, fast-moving show was the end product of his efforts.

full weekend of activities greet alumni

While students were seeking sun and rest in Mansfield or Miami, alumni streaked to the University for a full weekend of tradition and old friends, and to see what of their Alma Mater had and hadn't changed.

Under General Chairman William E. Knepper, the events flowed with a smoothness that is not achieved without lots of preplanning and months of hard work.

The festivities began on March 20 with the Centennial Ball held in the Sheraton Columbus. Honorary Chairman President and Mrs. Fawcett and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Caniff presided over the occasion, which featured the orchestra of Sammy Kaye.

Reunions of the classes of 1910, 1920, and 1945 got into full swing on Saturday with luncheons, speeches from the likes of Woody Hayes, and songs from the Men's Glee Club.

That afternoon, Mershon Auditorium became the center of activities with the show "Time and Change" drawing a full house. With the aid of the Marching Band, under the direction of Charles Spohn, and slides depicting the development of Ohio State, the production integrated visual effects with music and commentary to tell the story of the University from its beginnings.

Critic Malcolm Cowley talked of his friend, James Thurber, during dedication ceremonies of the James Thurber Reading Room in the Main Library. Mrs. Thurber was presented with a Centennial Award.

music, rhetoric celebrate university's founding

An Open House at the Union later in the afternoon was highlighted by a fashion show presented by Mrs. Morton Reeves and members of the Franklin County Alumnae Club.

A record-setting 1,352 people attended the Sunset Supper that evening in the Twin Ballrooms and the Terrace Dining Room. The dinner was followed by the presentation of the Alumni Centennial Awards to such famous names as Jesse Owens, Chic Harley and Woody Hayes. Afterwards, the guests were entertained with a number of "period rooms" for dancing, reminiscing and partying.

On Sunday, the formal Convocation in observance of the granting of Ohio State's charter was held in Mershon. The University Concert Band, directed by Prof. Donald McGinnis, and the Men's Glee Club, directed by Prof. Staiger, provided musical accompaniment for the ceremonies, which included New York Times columnist and executive James Reston as speaker.

The Centennial Concert, presented by the College of the Arts on Sunday evening in Mershon, united the Symphonic Choir and Chorale, directed by Prof. Casey, with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Erich Kunzel, presenting Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on the bicentennial of the composer's birth. The high point of the evening came with the presentation of the Ascension Cantata by Daniel Pinkham of the New England Conservatory of Music, a composition written especially for the centennial.

ling takes election by narrow margin

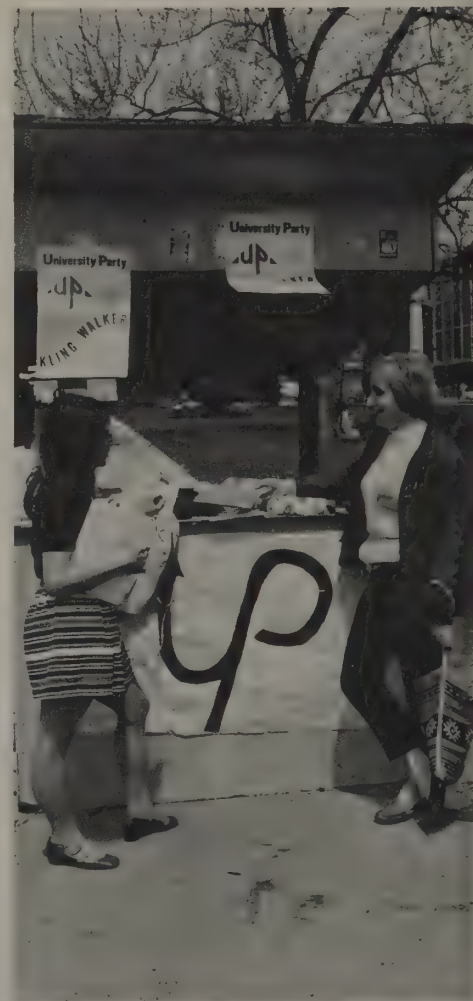

For the fourth straight year, University Party came out on top in the election for President of the Undergraduate Student Body. Stephen P. Kling, with Linda Lee Walker as his running mate, defeated United Student Organization candidates Dale V. Bring and Robert E. Miles by a margin of only 98 votes.

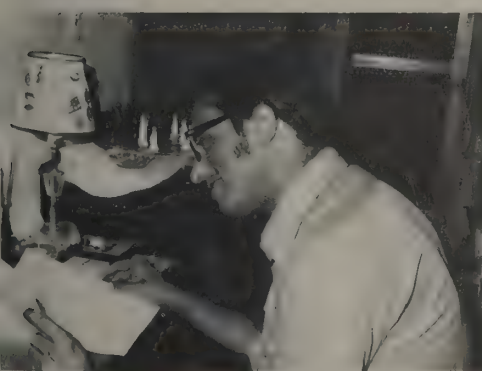

A total of 7,540 votes were cast, more than double the number of students that voted the previous year. Good weather and an intense campaign to urge students to participate were thought to have been responsible for the increase.

In their campaign, Kling and Walker urged a legal offensive against the sophomore dormitory rule, an increase in the number of rock concerts on campus, a re-evaluation of basic course requirements, and expansion of the course proficiency system.

Ohio State Unlimited candidates Sterling E. Gill and Brian Buzby polled the third largest number of votes. Gill, with candidates from other parties, successfully challenged the rule that required candidates to have a minimum grade average of 2.5. The University Court found it to be in violation of the equal protection of the U.S. Constitution.

Two referendums included on the ballot were both passed. One called for the immediate withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam and the other for the standardization of election procedures.

A PUBLICATION FOR THE CAMPUS COMMUNITY AND FRIENDS OF THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

You-Niversity

Press

'you-niversity' created for, by students

"You-Niversity Press" had its beginnings with the demise of the "University Forum" at the end of Autumn Quarter. Several members of the "Forum" staff decided that the need for a student-run publication was still great, and petitioned the Publications Board for a grant to start the "You-Niversity Press." The Board approved the money, and the staff began to assemble the first issue.

According to staff writer Steve Irwin, the goal of "You-Niversity Press" was to publish a bi-weekly newspaper that would provide unbiased news reporting and a forum for individual student opinion. The paper was to be funded through student-solicited ads. "Any Ohio State student may join the staff," Irwin stressed, "and anyone may submit articles."

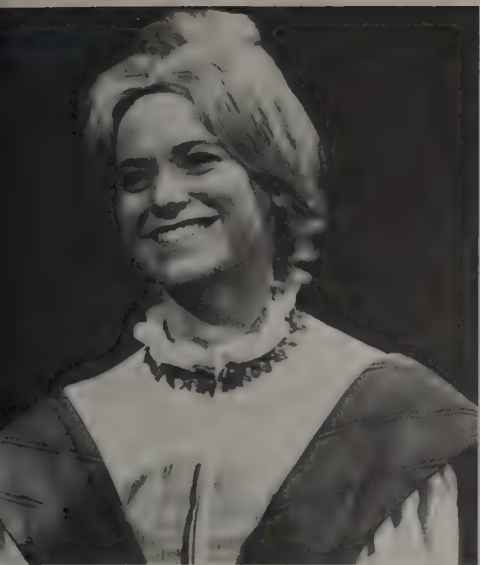

With Mark Kapel as editor, the paper debuted on April 9 with eight pages of articles, reviews, cartoons, and editorials. The main features included a letter from Vice-President John Mount and a spread on northern Ohio colleges in comparison to Ohio State.

Though the paper only published once, due largely to subsequent spring disturbances, the "You-Niversity Press" planned to continue operations in the fall.

lawrence and lee's 'thoreau' premieres for centennial

The world premiere of Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee's "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail," generated an excitement that reached from the stage of the Ohio Historical Museum on High Street all the way to ... well, Broadway.

Lawrence (a 1937 graduate of Ohio State) and Lee, whose previous collaborations included "Inherit the Wind," "Auntie Mame," "Mame," and "Dear World," finished the play in time for its presentation as the official Centennial theatrical production.

In addition to the playwrights, the audience for the April 21 opening night included George Oppenheimer, drama critic for "Newsday" and president of the New York Critics Circle. His reactions reflected the tremendous critical and audience approval the show immediately received. "I think the production was just great," he commented. "It's an extremely relevant play, very sensitive and poetic."

With its focal point in Thoreau's overnight incarceration after his refusal to pay taxes to finance an unfair, undeclared war on Mexico, the play proceeded to paint a startlingly moving portrait of Henry David Thoreau: Teacher, student, lover of natural things, free spirit.

Seeing Thoreau's relationships with those who influenced him, the audience was made to realize the timelessness of the struggle between the individual and those who would beat him down with clubs of hypocrisy, bigotry, and ignorance.

The play was necessarily talky (it had a lot to say), and at times the parallels between 1846 and 1970 were a bit forced, but the majority of the lines were lyrical and refreshingly optimistic.

The production, under the able direction of Roy Bowen, featured the creme de la creme of Ohio State's Thespian talent, and their performances, both when working together and individually, were considered, intelligent characterizations.

But even with all that stagecraft hard at work, one actor, David Ayers as Thoreau, grabbed the show at its beginning and made it his own.

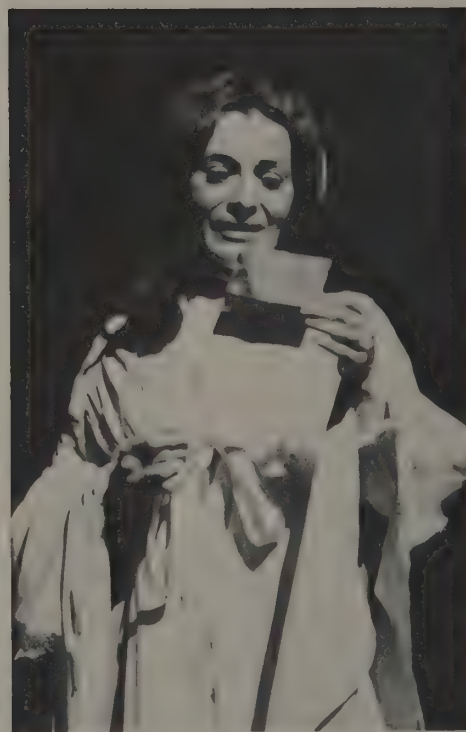

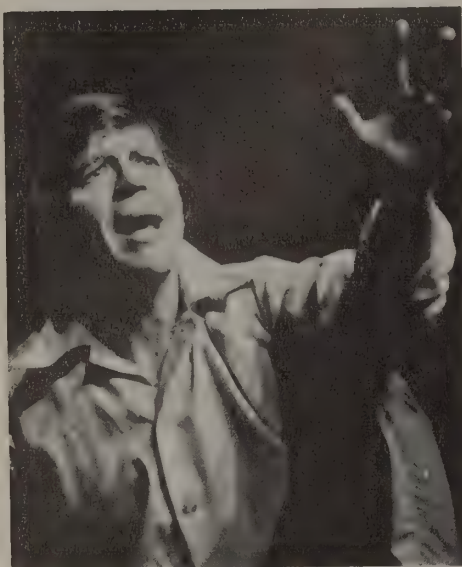

Delivering every line as if it ended with an exclamation mark, Ayers created a bigger-than-life character, a "now" Thoreau, a man whose spirit truly merited a three-hour play. Indeed, after the experience of Ayers' performance, a meeting with the real Thoreau would have to have been a let-down.

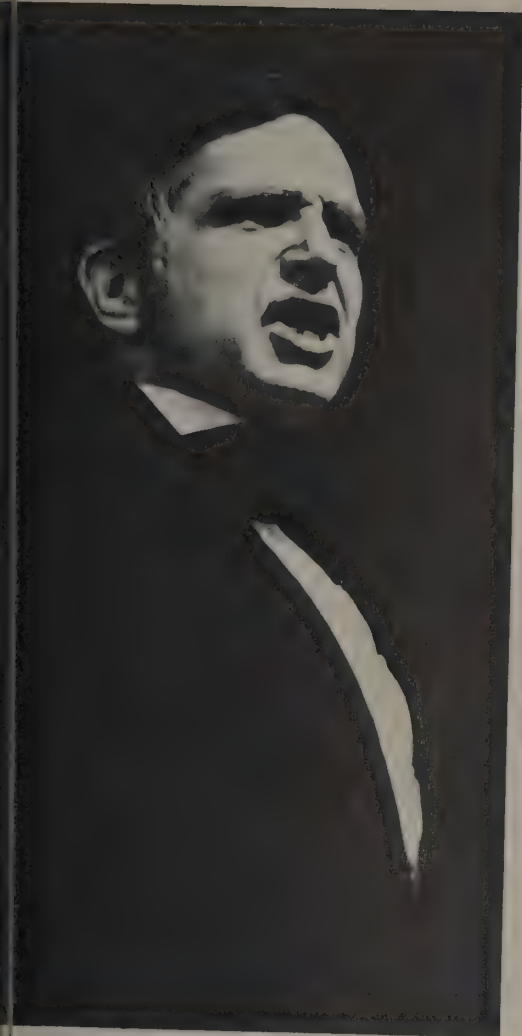

In other roles, Anthony B. Schmitt as brother John, Bronwynn Hopton as Ellen, and John W. Toth as the stuffy Schoolmaster, shone brilliantly even though their parts consisted of episodic scenes throughout the play.

David Chappell's costumes and Russell Hastings' sets were wisely kept simple, bringing the focus to what was being said. Lighting by W. Alan Kirk was quite effective, as were Charles Spohn's percussion score and J. A. Huff's original music.

pollution, ecology dominate campus earthday activities

With the attitude of "Have you thanked a green plant today?" Earthday arrived at Ohio State on April 22, well-planned and supported by everyone. Students, faculty, Administration, and Columbus residents were drawn to the day-long activities sponsored by the Earthday Committee and the Geology Department. Edmund Schofield, a doctoral candidate in botany, served as chairman.

Gov. James A. Rhodes spoke at the "Rite of Spring" at 7 a.m. in Browning Amphitheatre. About 150 people sacrificed their morning sleep to attend the opening program which included music and poetry.

Despite a light rain, some 250 people participated in the "River Walk" led by Vice-President for Academic Affairs James Robinson. The trek, called "Our River—Its Past, Present, and Future," featured riverbank stations to explain the problems of the river's ecology.

Speakers, scheduled throughout the day, informed their audiences of today's environmental problems. Mike Frome, conservation editor of "Field and Stream," discussed "What Students Can Do About Pollution."

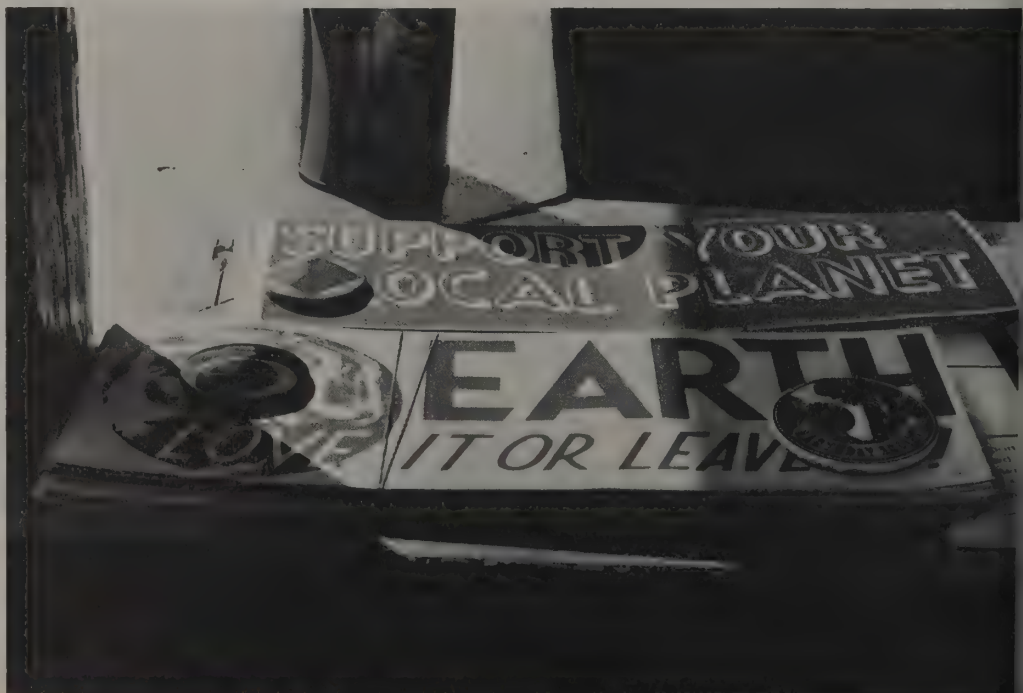

A panel discussion on "Government's Role in Combatting Pollution," featured Ohio State political science instructors, James Goodrich, Democratic candidate for the 12th Congressional District, and John McDonald, Democratic candidate for attorney general. John Glenn spoke to a Hitchcock Hall audience on "Environment in the '70's."

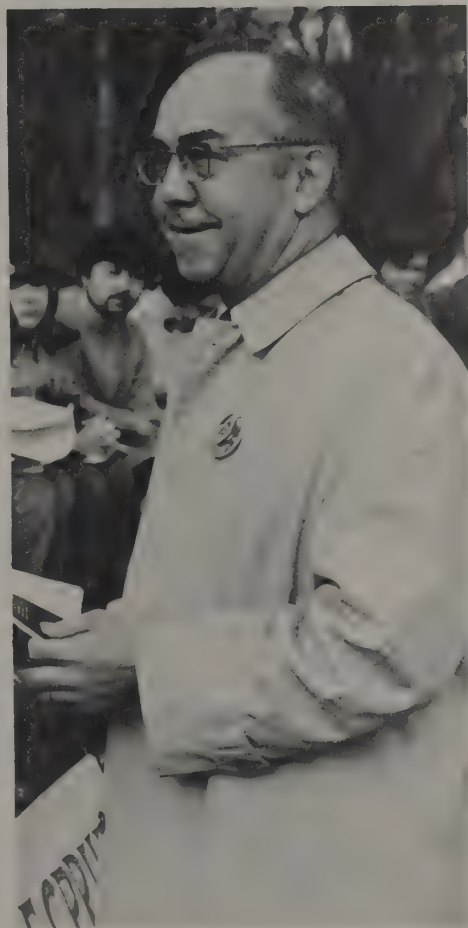

Over 20 workshops and panel discussions were held in the afternoon with topics ranging from population control to the legal aspects of pollution.

The West Ballroom in the Ohio Union housed exhibits and featured literature of the various participating groups. Buttons, posters, and bumper stickers commemorating Earthday were sold.

WOSU-TV aired two locally produced programs in conjunction with the day's activities. A Geology Department symposium on "The Role of Earth Sciences in Environmental Planning," and a three-hour program of appropriate poetry rounded out the day's activities.

The Ohio State Earthday Society said that it was going to keep its concern alive by planting several crops without benefit of pesticides.

young tennis team plays short season

Coach John Hendrix had hoped to improve on last year's tennis season, which ended with a poor showing of last place in the Big Ten competition. To accomplish the feat, Hendrix had a young team, with only three returning lettermen for support.

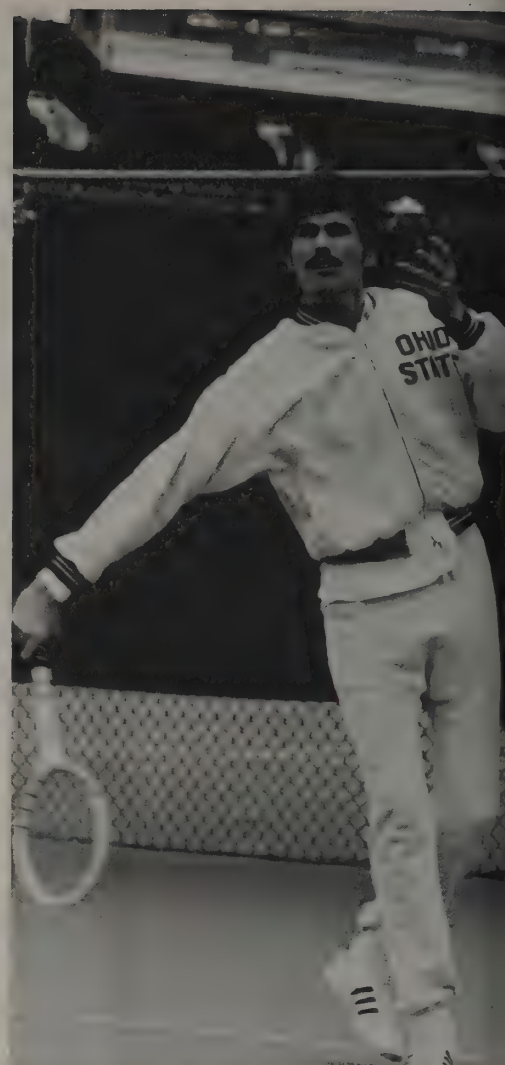

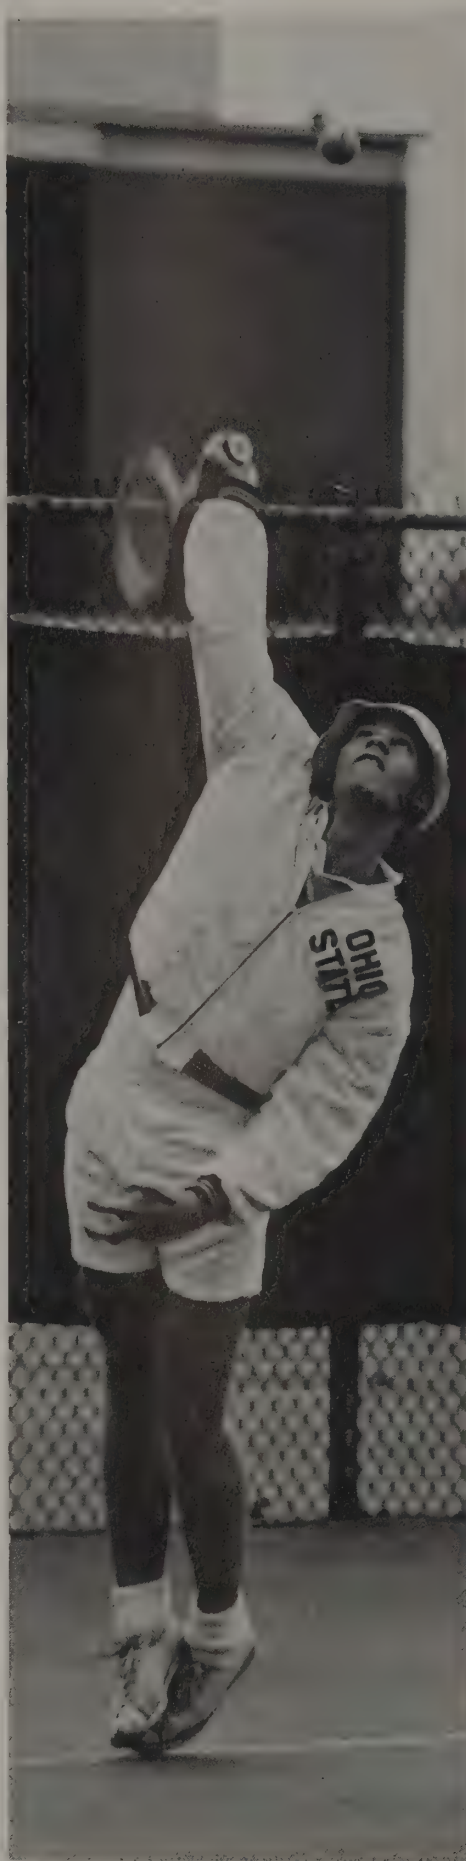

The season started out with promises of great things as the Bucks beat four of their first six opponents. But from there on, all the remaining matches went down on the books as Buckeye losses. The season ended with a disappointing 4-10 season record and 0-6 for conference play.

A real blow came when sophomore ace Drew Bracken missed five matches due to tendonitis of the wrist. Bracken was rated as second man on the squad and junior Richard Bowen as first. Junior Jerry Florian and captain Brent Chapman, the only senior on the squad, were next in line.

Because of the school shutdown, the season ended early, preventing the team from improving their record or competing in the Big Ten match.

buck golfers take sixth in conference

Before the golf season began, coach Rod Myers expressed his belief that the 1970 team had greater depth than any Ohio State squad he had coached. The team, he felt, had a good chance of bringing him his first Conference Championship.

The school shutdown took its toll on the links, and the golfers finished 6th in the Big Ten Championships. However, the 4-0 record more accurately bears out the truth in Myers' statement.

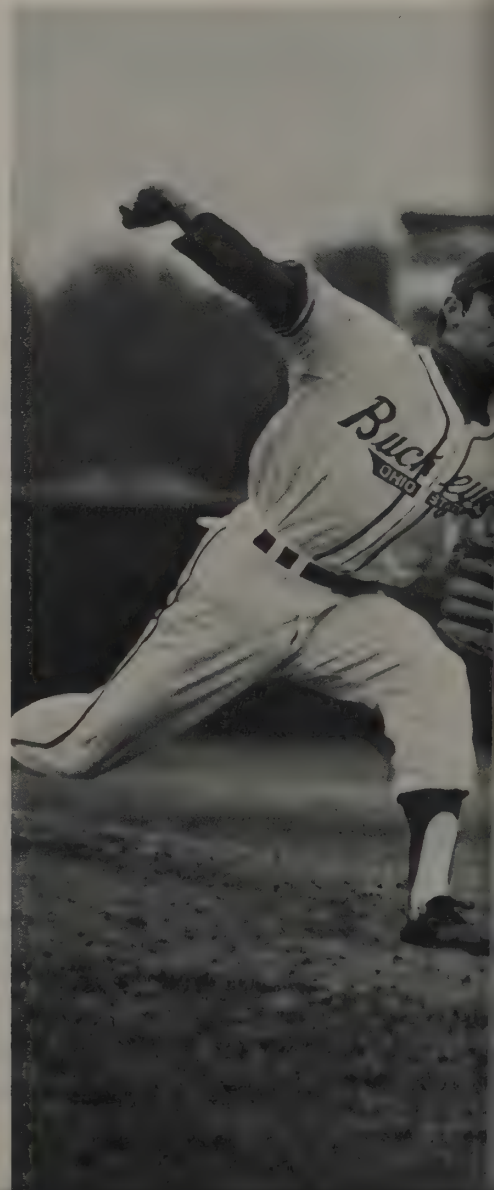

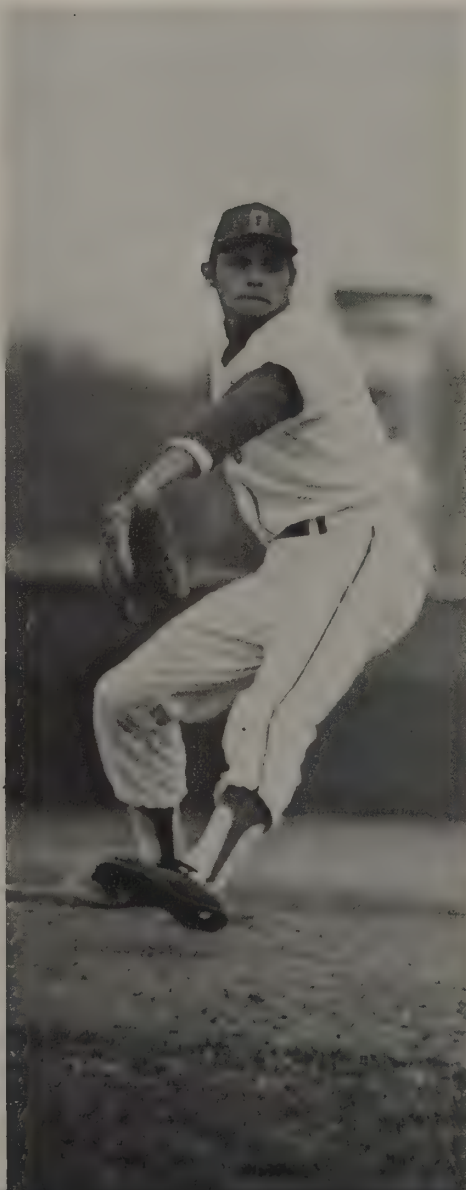

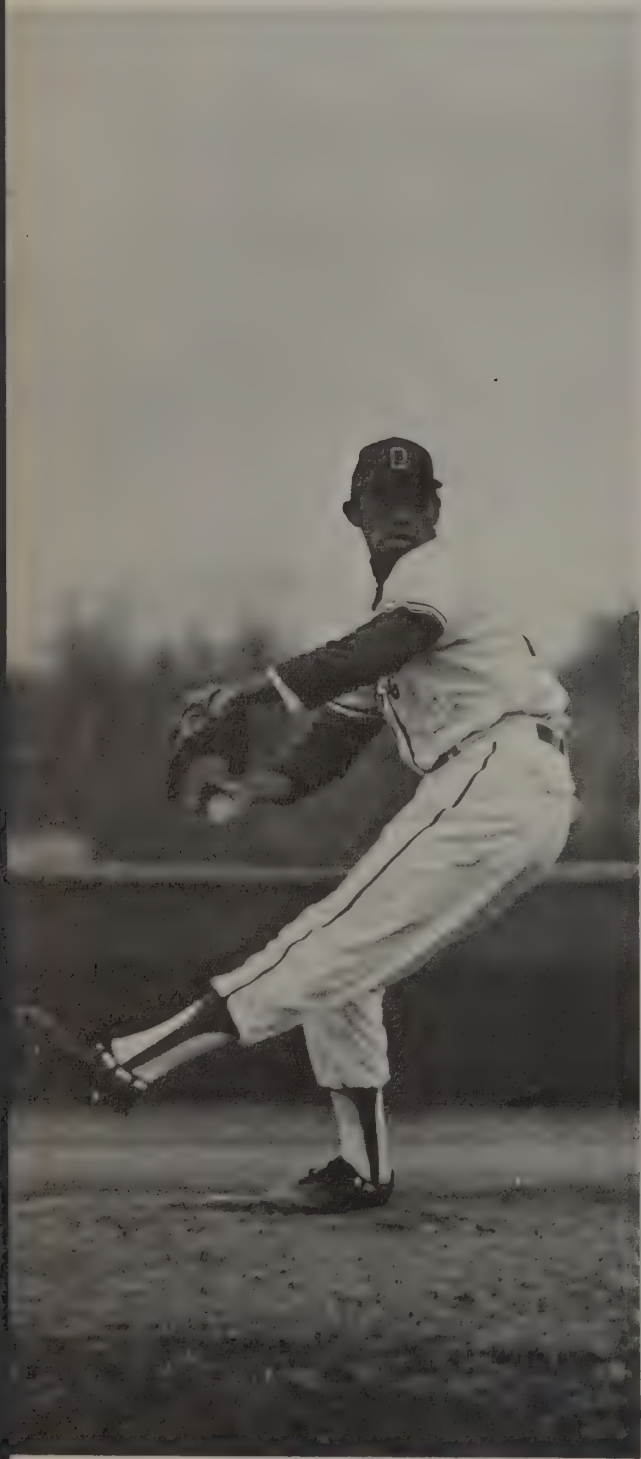

At the Kepler Invitational, in which Ohio State placed second, Ray Sovik tied for second place on an individual level with a 227 total, followed by Larry Stubblefield at 230. Sovik finished third at the Northern Intercollegiate tournament with 311, and Ralph Colla tied for fourth with a 313 total.

For the Big Ten tournament, which was originally scheduled for Ohio State but was moved to Illinois when the campus was closed, Buckeye golfers' lack of practice time showed through in their scores. The sixth place finish was understandable, considering that Ohio State's eligibility to participate was decided just two days before the tournament began.

moundmen lose title at winning season's end

The Ohio State baseball team was all set for a Big Ten championship until they played a team from Michigan, Michigan State it was, and were beaten. Deja vu?

The season was going great guns with no defeats in conference play and fine performances from coach Marty Karow's moundmen. Even the constant interruptions from early spring cold weather and the school shutdown didn't do much to bother the hitting and pitching. One Big Ten coach called the Buckeye team the best Ohio State had produced in 20 years.

For the last two outings, the Bucks traveled to East Lansing, needing to win only one of the two games to claim the conference title, but returned with 2-1 and 5-3 losses and a runner-up spot to Minnesota.

At the post-season banquet, Mike Polaski and Kevin Rusnak got top honors. Polaski received the Potter-Runmaker Cup for being the most productive offensive player, and Rusnak, who had been elected team captain, was praised by Karow as the best outfielder in the Big Ten and one of the best players he had ever coached.

inspired by rug, gridgers train for fall

With thoughts of the Michigan defeat still in everyone's mind, Buckeye gridgers began their spring training season as soon as the quarter commenced. Even if someone had wanted to maybe push "that game" back into the far reaches of their mind, a gift of a rug with the 1969 Michigan score on it, and a space to add the 1970 score, made forgetting impossible. Coach Woody Hayes placed the rug in front of the dressing room where each player would have to run over it a minimum of 204 times before the Bucks and Wolves meet again on November 22.

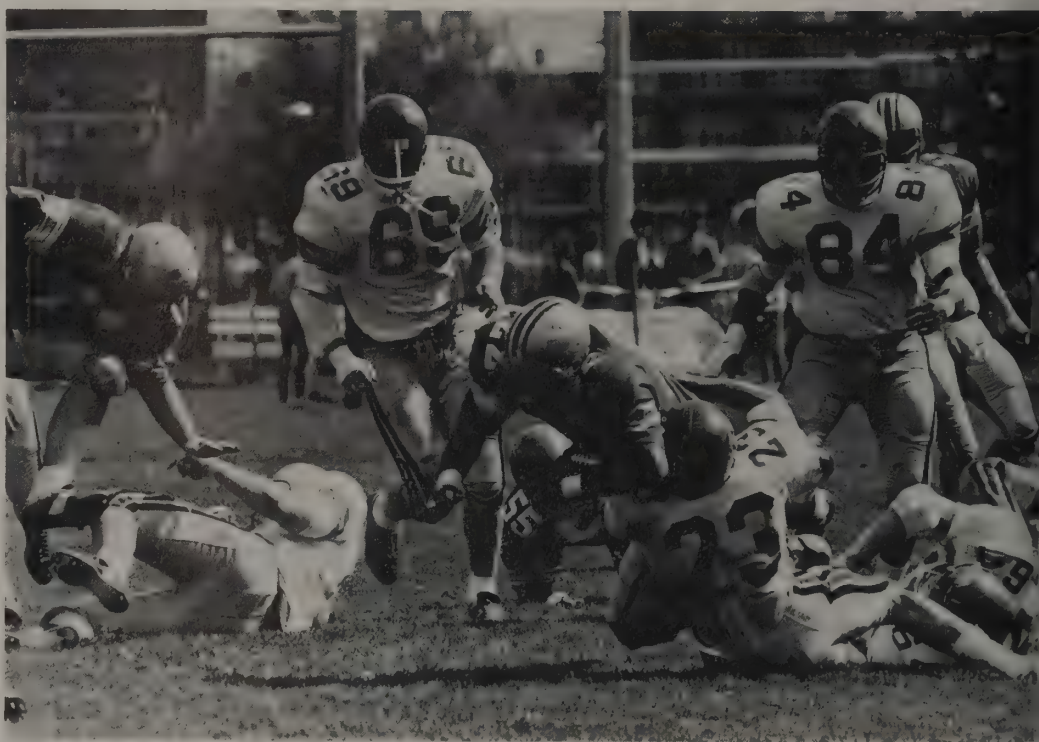

Practice began with 45 returning veterans, 31 of them lettermen, and 42 freshmen. Graduation claimed only a few key men, among them fullback Jim Otis.

Twenty practice sessions were scheduled by Hayes before the May 2 game. Scrimmages looked good, with the freshmen getting a chance to see how they stood in comparison to seasoned varsity players.

The spring game, attended by 25,000 spectators out for a preview of next season's team, ended with the red team romping over the white team by a score of 55-7. Hayes, however, did not seem entirely satisfied with the day's performances. "We were dull today," he commented.

There were some nice surprises, John Brockington's two touchdowns among them. Leo Hayden played a steady game and Rex Kern ran and faked with his usual expertise. Veterans Jim Stillwagon, Doug Adams, and Bruce Jankowski looked great.

There was a lot of switching from one team to another, with Ron Maciejowski doing most of the quarterbacking for the white team and Kern for the red. Brockington ended the day with 193 yards in 25 carries. Placed kicking looked better than ever, with five different men making nine of ten extra point attempts.

school records

Broken records by the barrell and a vastly improved team was the track story at Ohio State. Far- ing better indoors than out, coach Bob Escamp's runners and field- men, most of whom were not seniors, placed fourth in the in- door Big Ten meet and seventh in the outdoor.

Nine varsity records had been shattered by the end of the winter season. They were: High jump (Ray Hupp, 6' 10 $\frac{1}{4}$ "); triple jump (Doug Collucci, 48' 2"); pole vault (Ken Koch, 15' 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ "); 60-yard dash (Jerry Hill, 6.0); 300-yard dash (Jimmie Lee Harris, 30.9); high hurdles (Jim Barber, 8.3); 2 mile run (Doug Scorrar, 8:53.9); mile re- lay (Fred Collins, Greg Sipp, Jim- mie Lee Harris, and Dick Brugge- man, 3:15.4); distance medley (Bob Lamneck, Jim Trapp, Doug Scorrar, and Greg Klipan, 10:10); and 600 yard run (Dick Brugge- man, 1:09.4).

At the outdoor conference meet, which was held immediately after Ohio State reopened, Jim- mie Lee Harris led the Buckeyes with two seconds and a third place finish. Other point scorers were Marc Debevc, who threw the dis- cus 160' 1" for a second place, Doug Collucci in the long and triple jumps, Doug Scorrar in the three mile competition, and Jerry Hill's fifth in the 100 yard dash. Overall, the meet was dis- appointing for most of the former record breakers.

ruggers record 6-1 season

The Ohio State rugby team, coached by Glyn Meyrick, began its season the way most other sports finish up—with the Big Ten championship game. Because the match was held so early, State's practice time was cut short, and Buckeye ruggers lost the championship title to Indiana. Wisconsin placed second and Ohio State, third.

Otherwise, the season was a success, with six wins and one disputed loss, to Wisconsin. Special satisfaction came from trouncing the Pittsburgh Rugby Club, 11-0. From a slow first half, the Bucks led by New Zealander Roger Clay, co-ordinated defense and offense to shut out the Pittsburgh squad, considered to be one of the top teams in the East.

A victory against the powerful Cleveland Blues brought more reason for rejoicing. Though Clay brought in all the points for the team, Australian Dave Watson gave strong support.

The last game, an 11-15 triumph over Bowling Green, was especially hard won since the Bucks had not been able to practice for three weeks due to the campus disturbances and subsequent shut-down of the school.

lacrosse team suffers from lost practice

With high hopes for improving their 6-4 record of last year, the lacrosse team moved into its spring schedule with a strong squad composed mostly of experienced juniors.

With the school shutdown abbreviating the schedule, as well as forcing a two-week layoff from play, the 4-4 final record is a respectable one.

Beating Wittenberg and Michigan State, the loss to Ohio Wesleyan was largely due to that team's greater experience. Romping over Kenyon 15-4 and Vanderbilt 22-3, the defeat by Oberlin was due mostly to Buckeye inability to keep possession of the ball. Ohio State lost the final two matches to Denison and the Columbus Lacrosse Club. The latter team, comprised of experienced, older players provided real challenge for the Buckeye squad.

Captain Warren Galvin took the spotlight at the awards banquet just as he had on the field during the season. In addition to being named most valuable player, Galvin was also named to the first team All-Midwest squad at the attack position. Tim Michael, also picked for the All-Midwest squad, copped the "Ground Ball Award," in reward for his consistently good playing.

violence, talks follow black demands

On March 9, a group of black students representing the Afro-Am Society, presented Vice-President John Mount with a list of 19 demands and asked that they be distributed to other University administrators.

Black leaders met with various University officials on March 10 and 11 in a series of meetings to determine exactly what was being spent for black-oriented programs. With background from several sources, Mount met with five black faculty members and five administrative colleagues on March 12 to discuss the concerns and to decide what might be done in response to the special needs of black students. It was decided that Mount should talk with representatives of the black student leadership.

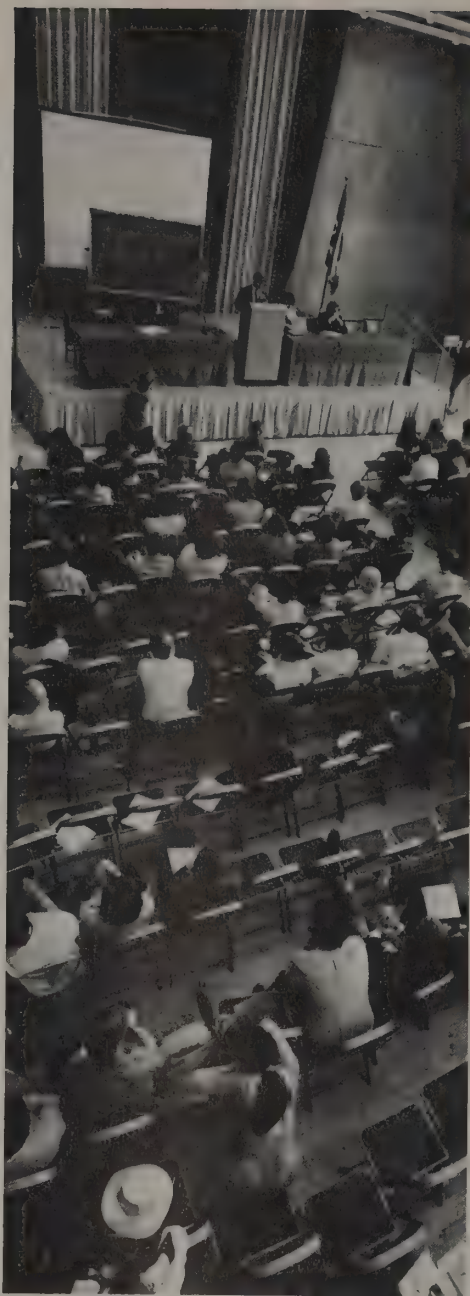

Shortly before noon on March 13, the Administration Building was put under security by University officials fearing possible violence. At noon, 12 blacks were admitted to the building to confer with Mount. On leaving the building, the group held the door open, allowing 75-80 persons to enter. The group broke windows and scattered papers. At the same time, four blacks entered the Administrative Data Processing Center in Derby Hall, and overturned a key-punch machine, a file cabinet, and scattered data processing cards around the room. At 1 p.m. the State Highway Patrol arrived to augment the University Police force.

A temporary injunction to prohibit further disruptions of the University's normal functions was requested and later in the afternoon, the injunction was issued.

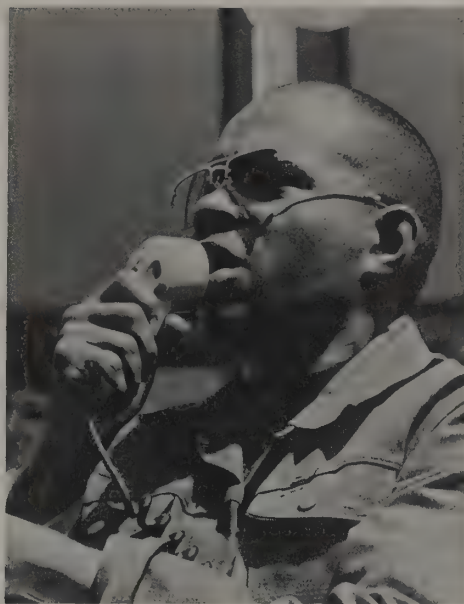

Later in the same afternoon, a delegation of three black students and one faculty member met with Mount, but their talks were, in Mount's words, "unproductive."

vietnam, lower fees subjects of early spring demonstrations

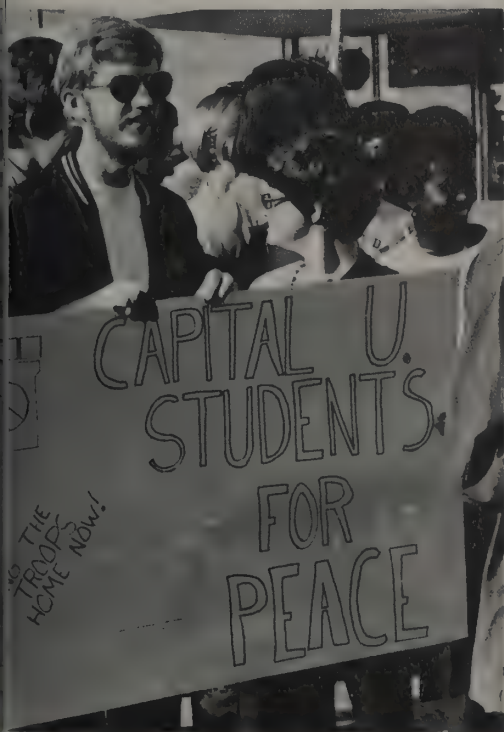

Another Moratorium Day on April 13 was highlighted by a teach-in in the Union. Sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Government Cultural Affairs Committee, the program aspired to present as many different views on the Vietnam war as possible. Speakers included a representative from the Young Americans for Freedom; John Evans, speaking on "Vietnam and Black America"; and Mrs. Le Tha Anh, Vietnamese citizen. A religious symposium was also held.

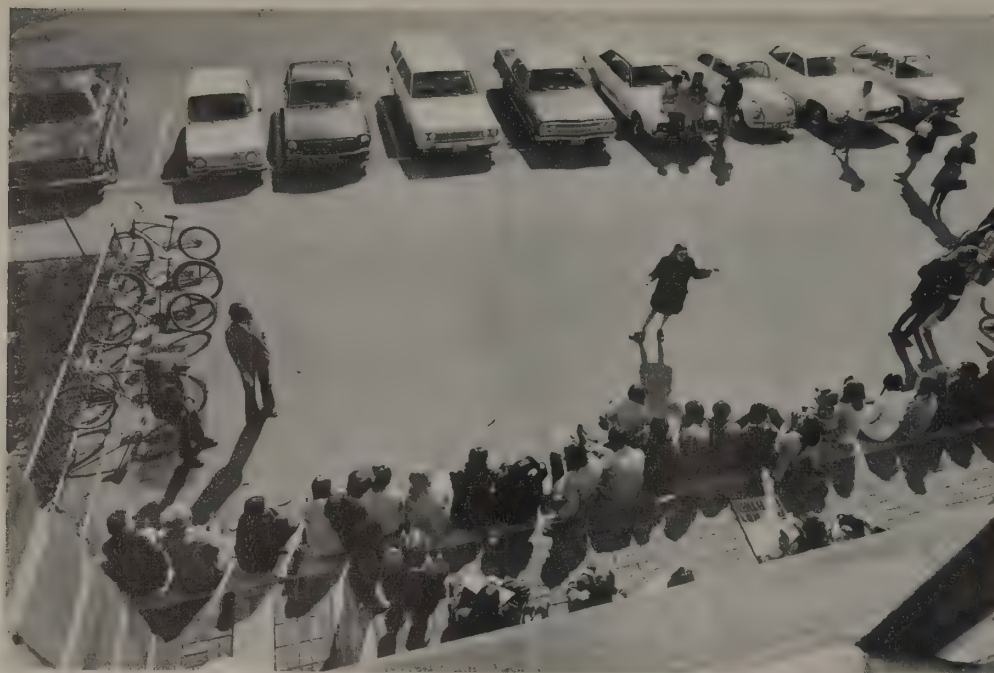

A 4½ mile march on April 18 let 1,700 students express their concern about the rising cost of education. Sponsored by the Students for Reasonable Fees and Fair Taxes, the activities began with a rally on the Oval around noon. At 12:50 the group began its hike down High Street to the State Capitol building, carrying signs and chanting to advertise their cause.

Participating schools were Ohio State, Ohio University, Central State University, Bowling Green State University, and Cleveland State University.

Led by representatives from Central State and Student Assembly President-elect Stephen P. Kling, the march was kept in control by student-appointed marshalls. A Columbus policeman cleared traffic for the group.

On arriving at the Capitol building, which was locked, the marchers listened to a number of speakers. One man condemned the news media for not having any representative to cover the event.

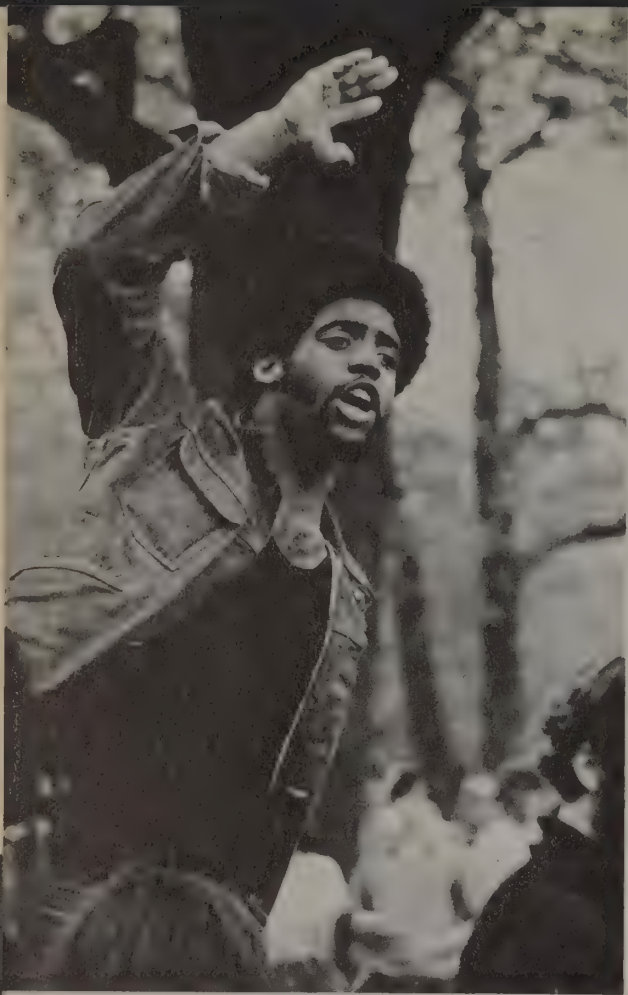

prospectus '70 ends with six arrests

On April 20, almost 100 students in the School of Social Work walked out of classes in protest of what they felt was a denial of their right to help make decisions concerning classes, course structure, field placement and the role of the School in the community. During the day, handbills condemning "Prospectus '70," a career information program held in the Union, were passed out on campus. Shortly after noon on the 20th, about 100 students entered the Ballrooms blocking displays and scattering literature until Wendell Ellenwood, director of the Union, asked them to leave.

The next day, minutes before noon, a group estimated at 175 people, marched to the Union from an initial rally on the Oval. Six were dressed in black and carried a box representing a coffin. Soon after they entered the "Prospectus '70" area, Ellenwood asked the group, whose members were chanting and ringing bells, to leave the premises. Mount then ordered some protestors arrested. Police used nightsticks, mace and fists to arrest six students, who were then taken to the Columbus City Jail.

assembly endorses class boycott

On April 24th, a rally, sponsored by the Ad Hoc Committee, was held on the Oval and attended by about 300 people. After several speeches, most of which were in support of a student strike set for April 29, the group moved to the Administration Building where a list of ten demands was given to be distributed to administrators.

A meeting was held in the afternoon of the 27th between members of the Ad Hoc Committee on Student Rights and Vice President Robinson and two other administrative officials.

President Fawcett released a letter in answer to the demands, which he said were supported by "less than one per cent" of the students, faculty and staff.

Another meeting, with the same representatives plus Edmond Boston of Afro-Am, was held on the 28th. That night, the Student Assembly met and unanimously passed a resolution supporting a proposed student boycott the next day "until such time as members of the Administration agree to meet and frankly and openly discuss with student representatives, in clear and concise terms, those programs and policies in which the University is presently engaged in attempting to alleviate the problems..." The resolution was largely in response to Fawcett's "one per cent" statement.

Early the morning of the 29th, University officials alerted campus security and asked that the State Highway Patrol have a contingent of 40 men on standby in the event that they be needed for crowd control.

At 10 a.m., Vice President Mount released a letter in response to the Student Assembly endorsement which read, in part, "Within a week or ten days, we will prepare a comprehensive report which will specifically communicate where we stand at this time, as well as plans for the future."

'today the time is right'

By 11 a.m., small groups picketed buildings as students began assembling on the Oval for the announced noon rally. At 12 a.m. the Oval rally, estimated at about 2,000, began moving toward the Administration Building, the doors of which had been secured. Among the speakers who addressed the students was Lorraine Cohen, a teaching assistant in political science, who said, "Apathetic students are finally getting together and showing their power on this campus. For weeks and actually for two years, I have said the time is not right yet. Today the time is right. I didn't believe a violent confrontation was the way to achieve these demands and I still don't. We must set up a long term program of action."

By 1:00 p.m., large groups of students, led by marshalls, picketed buildings.

3:00 p.m.

Students blocked the entrance at Woodruff and Neil, stopping traffic.

3:30 p.m.

An estimated 3,000 persons gathered at 11th and Neil Avenues. Plain-clothed security men attempted to remove students and were resisted. Uniformed police became involved and four arrests were made.

police dispersed demonstrators from the Administration Building.

5:45 p.m.

Students, armed with rocks and bricks, faced patrolmen on 17th Avenue. Tear gas and 16 carloads of Columbus police in full riot gear dispersed the group.

6:00 p.m.

About 500 students charged through the gates at 15th Avenue and were halted.

7:30 p.m.

Seventeenth Avenue blocked.

7:50 p.m.

A concrete block barricade was set up across High Street at 13th Avenue and windows were broken in several area businesses.

8:30 p.m.

Police marched up 15th Avenue to Indianola, scattering students with tear gas. In the process, fraternities and sororities, as well as private residences, were gassed, resulting in two fires at the Beta Theta Pi House. Thousands of students, forced from apartments, dorms and houses by the gas, congregated on High Street.

9 p.m.

Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner ordered a curfew into immediate effect for the area from Olentangy River to Indianola Avenue, Fifth Avenue to Hudson Street.

10:15 p.m.

President Fawcett held a press conference, saying, "... The University has, over the years, experienced a number of demonstrations, ... none of which has resulted in such serious disruption ... As a result of continued escalation the University has requested and the Governor has authorized the use of the National Guard to assist in the restoration of order ... The University will continue to operate tomorrow morning, as usual, with no classes being cancelled."

10:25 p.m.

Violence subsided, with only occasional incidents.

11:40 p.m.

The Ohio National Guard arrived on campus to support the Highway Patrol.

Approximately 300 arrests were made in the University area, many for violations of the curfew.

violence continues after national guard arrives

April 30
10:00 a.m.

An estimated crowd of 4,000 students gathered on the Oval until dispersed by Guardsmen. Tear gas used extensively.

10:40 a.m.

Guard and Patrol rushed by demonstrators and gas again used to clear the Oval.

12:00

Some window breakage reported by stores on High Street. Tear gas used to clear about 350 persons from the corner of 15th Avenue and High Street. It was announced by the University Disciplinary Committee that students arrested on campus had been temporarily suspended if the reason for arrest included activities "which appear to be in violation of the University's rules on disruption."

1:45 p.m.

Guard moved off the Oval and students gathered for a rally which included speakers from the strike leadership. Some demonstrators left the Oval to confer with Mount, at first unsuccessful by then the second group reported that Mount was willing to talk.

6:00 p.m.

Student and faculty leaders asked permission to hold a "sleep-in" that night, which the 8 p.m. curfew would make illegal.

8 p.m.

A small group slept without incident on the Oval. Guard on duty as curfew went into effect.

May 1

10:00 a.m.

Oval rally began. Speakers included political science professor David Kettler and Lorraine Cohen.

11:30 a.m.

Students from the rally began picketing classroom buildings.

Evening

Vice Presidents Mount, Smith and Robinson met with leaders of the Ad-Hoc Committee, Afro-Am, and former Student Body President Tim Sheeran, to plan an evening television program which never took place. Administration altered its suspension policy to include only those students charged with inciting to riot, assault, and battery, and resisting arrest. Curfew was in effect from midnight to 6 a.m.

May 2 and 3

The weekend was quiet with meetings on all sides to review and plan. Substantial reduction in the number of Guardsmen on campus.

May 4

Robinson announced that $170,000 had been approved for the 1970-71 Black Studies division. During the day, 28 fire calls were made, 16 of which proved to be false.

10:00 a.m.

Picketing of buildings renewed following a short Oval rally.

11:00 a.m.

Student Assembly leaders discontinued support of the boycott, with the statement that each student had to make his own decisions on the matter.

4:00 p.m.

After a short rally on the Oval, students moved to the Intramural Field where the Army ROTC was holding its annual review to honor selected candidates. Guard called to the scene but no violence occurred.

May 5

Guardsmen escort food personnel through student picket lines at each dining facility.

10:00 a.m.

Students physically prevented from entering Denney Hall by demonstrators, despite pleas from student and faculty marshalls.

11 a.m.

Other buildings blocked.

2:15 p.m.

Guardsmen read statement to demonstrators at blocked buildings: "The right of other students must be upheld. You are ordered to leave this building or these premises."

3:00 p.m.

Guardsmen gathered on north campus and began moving south to clear the buildings. Students gathered on the Oval.

May 6

Early morning

Picketing of food facilities continued. Many employees did not report for work.

11:30 a.m.

President Fawcett cancelled ROTC Review and all May Day activities scheduled for the next day, which was to have been a University holiday. He asked that all classes meet as usual to discuss the issues.

Noon

Denney Hall blocked by a large group of demonstrators. National Guard pushed students back to the Oval.

2:30 p.m.

Columbus firemen called to campus for a fire on the second floor of Hayes Hall, which resulted in extensive damage to one art studio.

3:30 p.m.

Oval demonstration began to increase in size. One group moved to Fawcett's house where the National Guard dispersed it.

4:30 p.m.

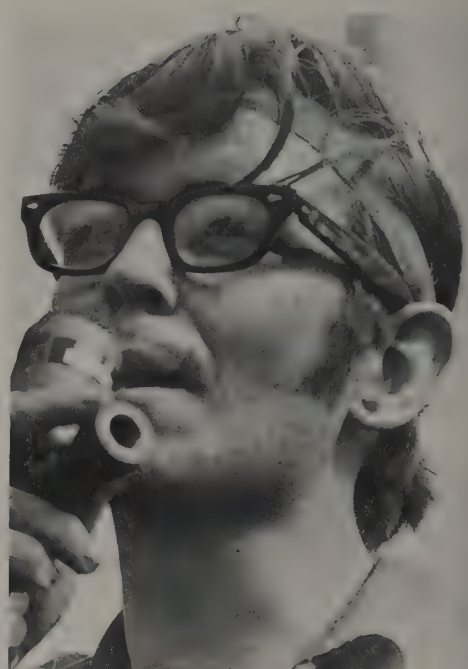

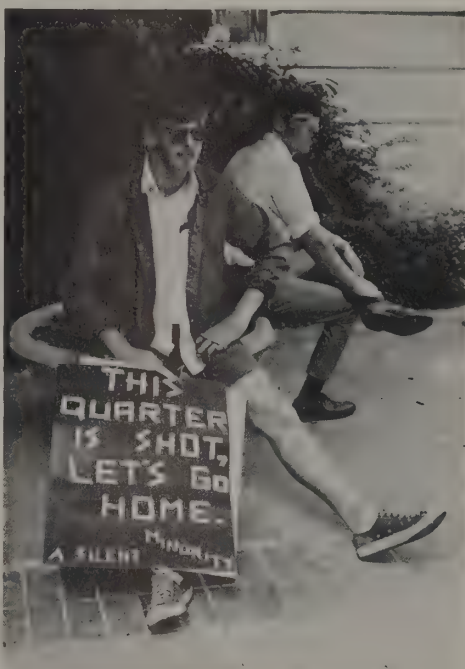

A large crowd of students gathered in front of the Administration Building and was pushed back by the Guard.

5:30 p.m.

President Fawcett closed the University: "At 5:15 p.m. this afternoon the Governor of the State of Ohio recommended to me that the Columbus campus of the University be closed immediately because of the imminent danger of further disruption and violence. After consultation with the Chairman of the Board of Trustees I am following the Governor's recommendation and I am closing the University until further notice. Students who can leave immediately are asked to return to their home tonight. All students are expected to leave the campus before noon on Thursday, May 7, 1970."

11:15 p.m.

Some 500 students held a silent candle-light vigil on the Oval as planned.

While the University was shut down, officials met frequently to review the situation and determine what might be done about student demands and reopening the school.

May 14

Board of Trustees voted unanimously to re-open the University on May 19 under heavy security.

May 19

School re-opened to students with access to the campus controlled through the use of student and faculty identification cards. The number of demonstrations allowed to congregate was limited to 10 everywhere but on the Oval. The Majority Alliance, created during the break by 13 campus organizations, circulated handbills which urged students to "Cool it! 1. Avoid confrontations 2. Use discretion. 3. Discuss but don't disrupt. 4. Stay informed. All we are asking is give peace a chance." About 2,000 students attended a noon rally called for by Afro-Am, Ad-Hoc Committee for Student Rights and Women's Liberation Front. Several hundred people marched to Battelle Memorial Institute to protest that organization's role in war research. There were no incidents.

May 20

Faculty Council unanimously agreed to suspend disciplinary action against students; voted that an optional passfail system of grading be put into effect for all courses; and extended classes into finals week with the final examination lasting only one hour. Vice Presidents Mount and Robinson were hospitalized suffering from exhaustion and upper respiratory illnesses.

guard recalled after violence on high street

May 21

After a noon rally, demonstrators blocked entrances to Hagerty Hall, Derby Hall, and the Main Library. About 5 p.m., hundreds of students swarmed to the intersection of 11th Avenue and High Street, where they blocked traffic. Rocks were thrown through windows and about 300 State Highway patrolmen were brought into restore order. Mayor Sensenbrenner ordered a curfew back on the University area.

Damage to the university buildings included $10,000 worth of broken windows in Mershon Auditorium, extensive breakage in the Ohio Union and the College of Law building. Only three stores along the east side of High Street from Chittenden to Woodruff escaped damage. Fawcett and Columbus Safety Director James J. Hughes blamed the looting and breakage on outside agitators, not students.

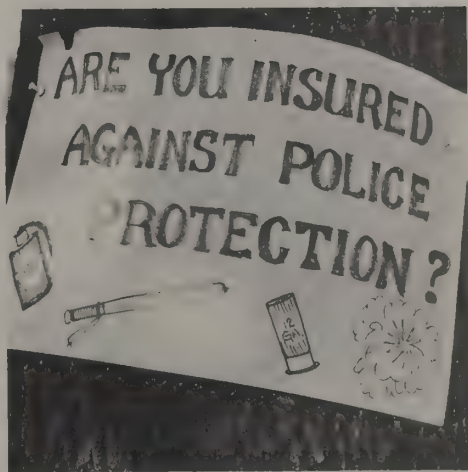

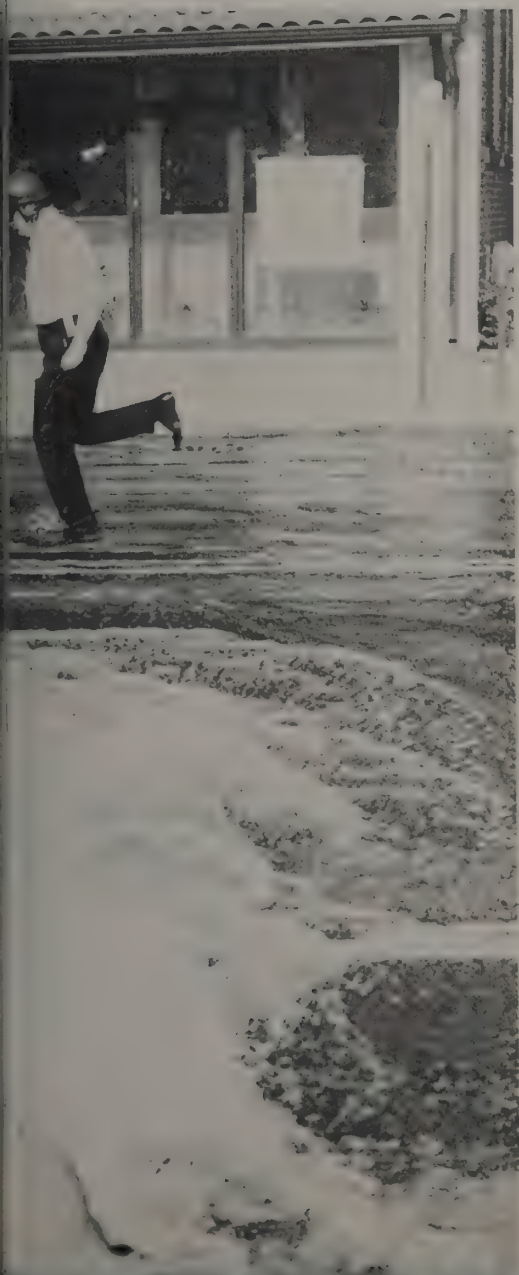

May 22

Classes were held as usual with 5,000 Guardsmen enforcing a cordon on an area bounded by Lane, Indianola, King Avenues and the Olentangy River Road. All pedestrians and cars were checked and only those people with "legitimate and lawful pursuits" were allowed through. It was announced that 90 people had been arrested the previous day.

May 24

Quiet conditions resulted in easing curfew to midnight to 6:30 a.m.

free university begins as talks resume

May 25

It was estimated that riot control would bear a price tag of about $1.5 million. The Board of Trustees met and passed the Faculty Council's recommendations concerning grades for Spring Quarter. An office for the Coordination of Minority Affairs was established. At a noon rally, attended by over 7,000 students, Professor David Kettler asked that the University continue as a "Free University" for the remainder of the quarter. Faculty Council's Committee of Five also sponsored a rally, with about the same number in attendance, at which Professor Louis Nemzer said, "We are not going to have a counter demonstration or anything that leads to violence. When the University closes and violence begins, it will be our obituary."

May 26

Negotiations between administrators and strike leaders were suspended as no agreement could be reached as to the site of the talks. A free University began on the Oval with about 300 participants. The group moved to a local church when the midnight curfew began.

May 27

Free University continued during the day. Student Assembly announced that it would hold a vigil and fast by a group of "elected and responsible student leaders" if negotiations between striking groups and administrators did not begin by 6 p.m. that evening.

May 28

Strike leaders agreed to meet at 2 p.m. with University officials. A $1-million law suit was brought against nine individual student leaders, the Third World Solidarity Committee, the Student Mobilization Committee, and the Ad Hoc Committee by nine students and the parents of one student. The suit asked a permanent injunction and the payment of $1 million in damages to non-striking students. The remainder of the National Guard left campus and was disbanded.

ross named to head black studies

Talks between student groups and the administration continued on a daily basis and it was decided that the discussions would also be held during the summer. General co-ordinator for the meetings was Vice-President Mount.

June 9

President Fawcett lifted the curfew. Faculty Council met and approved revisions of the disruptions rule and establishment of a hearing panel. It was also decided that the Faculty Council would meet periodically during the summer months.

June 11

The Board of Trustees, with three members absent, met and rejected the Faculty Council's new disruption rule and also did not approve the appointment of Charles O. Ross as head of the Black Studies division. Fee increases were approved.

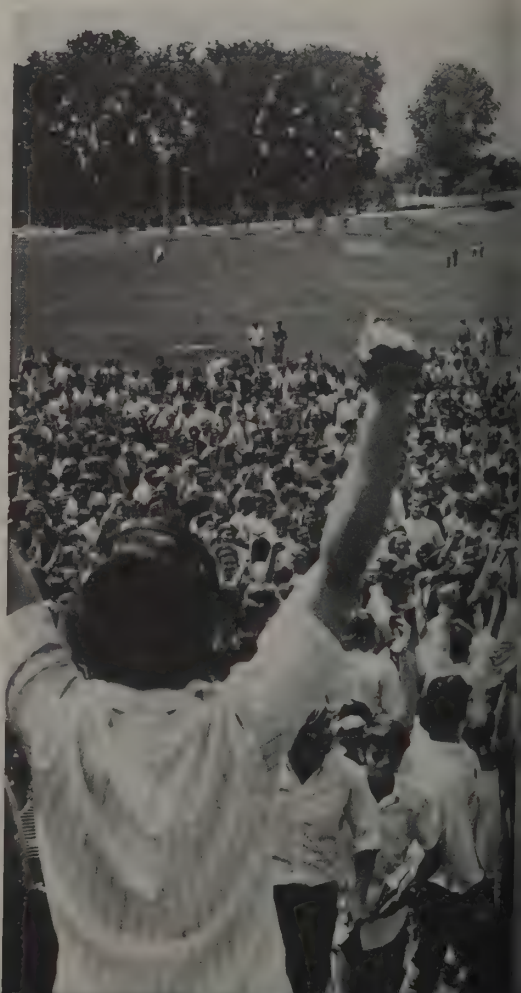

June 19

Five of the nine trustees met to reconsider Ross' appointment after a barrage of student, faculty and administrative criticism. By roll call vote, the appointment was unanimously approved by the five present. A young educator and civil rights leader, Ross took over the post on July 1.

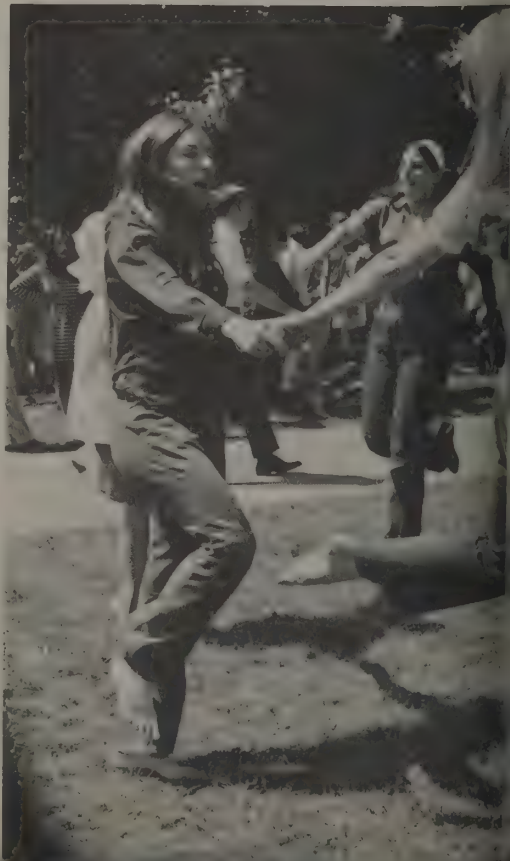

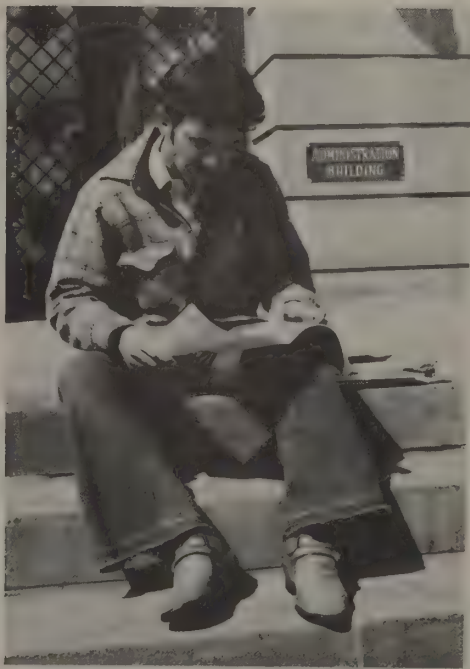

June 23

Trustee Frederick E. Jones resigned as a member and vice chairman of the University's Board of Trustees. In a letter to Gov. James Rhodes, Jones said that his concept of how a Trustee should represent the people of Ohio apparently differed from that of other officials.

most return to sun for spring's last days

The account of events from March 13 to June 23 compiled from The Ohio State University Monthly, The Lantern, and the Student Assembly reports.

An editorial:

How difficult it must have been for alumni and friends of the University—for anyone who based his conception of Ohio State on the Charter Weekend observance or earlier times—to comprehend what they read about the chain of events that upset the campus in April and May. How alarming for them to see such a disregard for property values, to hear such belligerent defiance of efforts to keep the campus open and operating.

The turbulence of Spring Quarter would have been more understandable, perhaps, if it had been interpreted as the students' version of Charter Weekend, as an explosive application of Charter Weekend's theme of re-assessing Ohio State with clear eyes. If outsiders could not see the strikes and the confrontations in this light, it was because the students were evaluating what Ohio State had become in terms of different values and priorities than the alumni had applied at the March reunion.

Those were the points of contention that made the circumstances of Spring Quarter so volatile—values and priorities, some of them derived directly from the college generation's perspective on the world, some of them popularized at campus rallies. The segment of the student body that clashed with the Administration did so because it found the official priorities inappropriate to certain needs, and because it gave higher priority to immediate, visible action than to projections and planned solutions.

Participants in the strike placed a higher value on the right of students to demonstrate as a unified bloc for the response they wanted, and assigned lower values to the continuity of classroom work and the individual's right to pursue his education without hindrance. Each missile thrown at policemen, whether it was material or verbal, expressed a negative value seen in the use of armed force to protect property and access routes of debatable importance.

Looking back, it is apparent that the worst clash of values resulted from the Administration's attempt on April 30 to keep alive the illusion that no amount of violence could keep the University from functioning normally. Official priorities demanded that students attend classes as usual; the awful consequence put conscientious students in the crossfire between strikers and police, a situation too gruesomely like the scene of four students' deaths at Kent State the next week. The Administration, of course, did not have the Kent tragedy as a precedent to warn it, but surely the violence of the previous day and night had warned it of the potential danger, and surely it did not think that tempers had been cooled by teargas and curfew arrests.

The official policy that kept campus open when violence was most likely, seems monstrous now. Did the Administration actually ask students to risk serious injury for the sake of one day's class-work? Did it actually expect disinterested students to remain so while Columbus police showed so little restraint and selectivity in their "protective" actions? Did it actually expect police, State Highway Patrolmen, and the National Guard to remain clear-headed when their instincts and instructions must have made every student obliged to be on campus look like a potential threat?

Questions of priorities and values have continued to accumulate since April 30, questions of what constitutes due legal process, of what makes a vehicle "undesirable," and so on. But one certainty has come out of the confusion: So long as there is such disparity among the priorities vying for its control, The Ohio State University is not completed, even if it is 100 years old, even if it is larger and richer in material advantages than ever before.

Venerable age and the price tags on 32 newly dedicated buildings will be weak defenses against demands for change. The University has grown for a long time, and made changes along the way, but this is not yet the time to believe complacently that it has reached its ultimate development. In its Centennial Year, Ohio State has only just begun to feel growing pains.

king's way fellowship

King's Way Fellowship, begun in October, 1969, as a special drive of the Wesley Foundation, was distinguished from the start by its close identification with the King Avenue United Methodist Church. The local congregation had opened its doors to students for years and remained a favorite place of worship for the University community.

With a full-time minister for students, Rev. Charles Cooley, stationed at King Avenue, the Fellowship drew students into an expanding list of activities: Student-led worship services, evening programs and suppers, treks to neighbor churches, the King's Way Singers, Student Forum, and Young Married Couples.

Members also provided leadership for the children of the Gladden Community House and the Ohio School for the Blind, formed a church vocations group, called on shut-ins, and initiated summer service projects.

Principal leaders for the first year of operation were Glen Herman, co-ordinator; Paul Manley, program director; Sally Bowers, Paul Miller, and Ray Landis, choir directors; Harold Cheyney, photographer; Dan Baxter, deputations; Joy Geib and Sally Troup, food; Ralph Bowers, house; and Tom Lawrence, treasurer.

Other leaders included Charlotte Pollard, John Trippy, Steve Tedrick, Joy Wharton, and John Westervelt.

ohio staters, incorporated

"Through its ideal of service, Ohio Staters, Incorporated, endeavors for the betterment of The Ohio State University. Whether selling seat cushions at football games or sponsoring pop concerts, we in Ohio Staters work as individuals, and as a team, to provide a more enjoyable atmosphere for the University community.

"The year of Ohio State's 100th anniversary, 1969-70, has brought the Fifth Dimension, Vance Packard, a campus-wide United Appeal drive, the Association, European charter flights, and a host of other projects and services that resulted from Ohio Staters' inspirations and efforts.

"Ohio Staters is comprised of 50 students, faculty, and alumni members who are dedicated to thinking, believing, and doing, in and about The Ohio State University. Together we form a co-operative to demonstrate that things can be accomplished at OSU.

"Ohio Staters does something."

majority still attends graduation

Four times a year, the Ohio Stadium or St. Johns Arena becomes a stage for the spectacle that is graduation from The Ohio State University. With the caps and gowns, invitations and all the accompanying accessories, many consider the ceremonies a meaningless hassle, deserving neither consideration nor attendance.

However, the vast majority still does show up, if only to please parents, to receive in person that which they worked hard and paid much for.

The autumn commencement, held December 19 in St. Johns Arena, found 1,525 seniors and graduate students receiving various degrees. Harry S. Thompson, publisher and executive president of "Newsweek," spoke on "The Communications Explosion." An honorary doctor of science degree was awarded to Edward A. Hobart, Ohio industrialist.

St. Johns was also the scene for winter graduation on March 19. Some 1,234 students heard John Ciardi, poetry editor of the "Saturday Review" and author of several books, give the commencement address. Honorary doctor of science degrees were awarded to: Hendrik W. Bode, Harvard University professor; William W. Cooper, dean at Carnegie-Mellon University; Henry B. Hass, chemical consultant; and Alvah Peterson, professor emeritus of entomology at Ohio State.

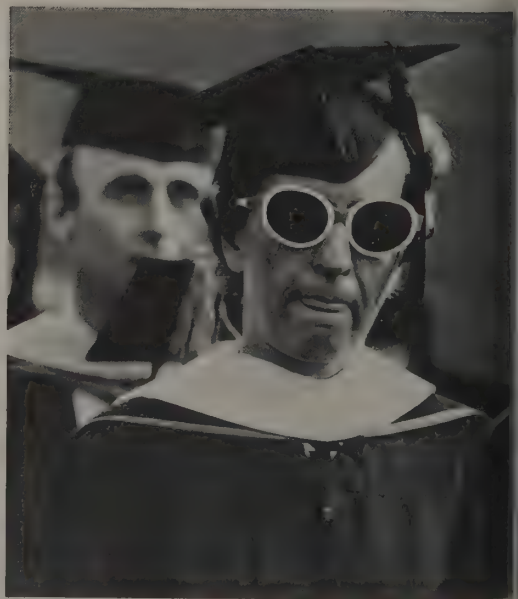

Robert H. Finch, U.S. Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, spoke to spring commencement held June 12 in the Ohio Stadium. An audience of 25,000 watched as 4,146 marched up to the platform to receive their diplomas. The campus upheaval which had closed the school was still in everyone's mind, and many demonstrated their pacifist feelings by donning peace symbols or refusing to wear the traditional cap and gown.

Finch, who received an honorary law degree, was reluctant to voice his personal feelings on the disturbances, but, he said, "I do not hesitate to comment on one part of the slogan now current on this campus: 'Keep it open.' That you must do."

Honorary degrees were also awarded to: Henry Steele Commager, professor of history at Amherst College; J. Walter Severinghaus, architect; Richard Bradfield, regional director of the Rockefeller Foundation; Paul J. Flory, professor of chemistry at Stanford University; Thomas Carlyle Jones, associate clinical professor of pathology at Harvard; James A. Shannon, retired director of the National Institutes of Health; and S. Fred Singer, deputy assistant secretary for scientific programs, U.S. Department of the Interior.

David Klein, a zoology major from Coshocton, Ohio, earned the highest academic average among seniors who completed all their academic work at Ohio State. On a four-point high scale, his 3.98 accumulated him a bachelor of science degree "summa cum laude."

our lives to this tough
roll of tape

It has become a tradition, of sorts, for this page of the Makio to contain a summary of the staff's year, and in passing, a reference to hapless Sisyphus, whose lot in Hell is to roll a boulder to the top of a slope and watch it fall to the bottom again. There were times this year when everyone's hard work and dedication made it seem as if Sisyphus might be left out for once, and those are the days we will be glad to remember. But predictably enough, there were many more days when the office was inaccessible, when the editor's instructions were too hazy to make up for his absence, when plans fell through because every negative had a scratch—then we knew that we had been pushing shoulder-to-shoulder with Sisyphus all along.

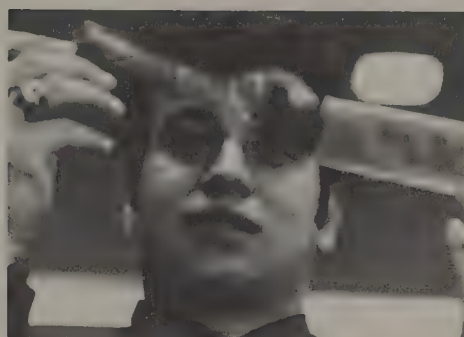

Look at the rest of this book to see what talented people I watched at work through the year. Then let me tell you that they accomplished all this with guts and lots of good humor. Carolyn lost no time in becoming my "left hand" (and at least three fingers of the right). Helen gave us more laughs than traumas when she made her "first mistake in life." Molt and Tetelman and Jenkins kept us on our toes (and on their trails) with their comings and goings. Kant-quoting Scarpitti and newcomers Greenwald and Sillick cheerfully went far beyond their respective calls of duty. Kuhlman and Shelley maintained their haven of order and efficiency in Room 319 (May Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner, and Smith bless their souls!). Stalwart Brice kept our heads together whenever the office began to sound like the third reel of "Chelsea Girls." And Steve Drake, sweating in fatigues as I type this, stood by us through the eating bouts in Dallas and the soccer game at Whetstone, alike.

These are the people whom I thank for pulling this project through the delays and the doldrums, through the trivia and the teargas. They deserve your thanks, too.

L. W. B.

Bard: "Lips that touch greasy fried chicken shall never touch mine!"
 Jenkins: "The beard—just be sure you print the one with the beard."
 Carolyn: "'Our associate editor; note the thoughtful, serious, contemplative gaze—the quiet and demure manner.'"
 Jones: "Just one more pose for the folks back home."

Kuhlman: "You get two inches of sand and Dallas is immobilized."
 Greenwald: "Okay, so I go on a ski trip all by myself."
 Scarpitti: "Like you can't get behind yourself to look at yourself. Wow!"
 Molt: "Experience, being the best teacher, leaves much to be desired. Ask Mona!"
 Brice: "Yes, it seems to be a general uprising throughout the country."
 Helen: "Sugar Pops sure are better than your dumb Frosted Flakes!"
 Mr. Drake: "Just don't tell the Pub Board about 'Mike and Steve and Lee.'"

There was supposedly a curse by which the ancient Chinese totally devastated their enemies' minds. Uttered between curled lip and gritted teeth, it went something like, "May you live in interesting times. (Spit.)" Until this year, I had never understood what it meant.

But as Scarpitti would say, "Off cursing!" I've done too much this year, and just now I want to share something that holds a great deal of personal meaning for me.

One of my favorite possessions is a cube of clear plastic, measuring a little less than three inches on each edge, with an ordinary dandelion seed cluster at its center. It sounds ridiculous. But everyone who has seen it has been fascinated by the paradox that something usually so fragile should come to have such permanence and weight.

At various times, when money has been a little more convenient and $10 has seemed a reasonable price for a sentimental gift, I have given some of my closest friends copies of the cubical plastic marvel. Now I find myself richer in friends than in financial assets, and the best way I know of to thank them for their support and kindness is to combine the two gifts I would like them to have, the dandelion puff and this yearbook. Actually, the two gifts would be much alike if I could actually give both, for each is something transitory made permanent—in one case, a wisp of feathery seeds; in the other, the events of a significant year.

With the hope that they understand, I dedicate my part of this Makio to the people who held me up through all the "interesting times": To George; to Corky and Ed; to Steve Vlahovich and Leeann and Mard and Marilyn; to Dr. Van Sickle; to Gary and the Larry's crowd; to my sisters, their families, my father and the memory of my mother. Among these many thanks, the warmest go to the person who backed me up with objective comments, gobs of acrylic paint, so many shared jokes, and generous encouragement at every step.

Leland Wright Bard
